Gas Pistols and Guns Russia Is Still Wicked When Best Minds Change The Maggot and the Liver

By Arthur Brisbane

NEW YORK, Chicago and other centers of gangster activity might send explorers to Milwaukee to investigate a report.

General Mitchell, in charge of all our fliers abroad in the big war, says Milwaukee is not troubled by gangsters, for the simple reason that if a gangster appears in Milwaukee, the Milwaukee police shoot him. And Milwaukee police do not make deals with the gangsters or divide their profits.

The mayor appoints police chiefs, says General Mitchell, and that ends it. The mayor has no power of removal. Milwaukee has only had two chiefs of police in 46 years.

By the way, General Mitchell says this country could easily build an airplane to go 400 miles an hour if it wanted to, but for some mysterious reason it does not take the trouble. He repeats what every intelligent man knows, that our national defense should be divided into three branches, the navy to take care of everything on the water, the army to take care of everything on land, and a separate air department to take care of everything in the air.

New York will provide "gas pistols" for its police force, small enough for the pocket, firing gas cartridges that incapacitate the person at whom they are fired. Police also will have gas guns to shoot gas through windows and subdue criminals inside.

Weapons of the same kind probably will be acquired by criminals, which will help to make the lives of ordinary citizens more exciting.

Russia continues her wicked career. She declines to cut her wheat acreage. Isn't that terribly wrong? Can you imagine how readily this government would agree to reduce its acreage of wheat, cotton, or anything else, if Russia requested it?

And Russia actually keeps cutting prices of goods, under prices or other countries, to get the business. Isn't that shocking?

You read about great storage tanks in Italy to hold Russian oil for Italian use at cut prices. Russia also has in Italy a great theater for her lumber industry. She gets that business by cutting prices. What can you do with such people?

If you ask a prosperous "best mind" to give impartial consideration to government ownership of national monopolies he will stare at you haughtily. But when a natural monopoly suddenly ceases to pay any profits to private owners, that "best mind" will admit that, under certain circumstances, it might be well for the government to take charge."

Your name was "Lenin-Marx-Bolshevik" if you suggested government ownership of railroads two years ago.

Now many of them are losing money, and even a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission says the best thing might be to have the government take all the railroads, and run them "as a unit."

You may even hear government ownership in power companies, advocated by the power companies themselves, when Diesel engines give power companies such competition as motor trucks and buses have given to the railroads. That may come.

General Mitchell says the new German "pocket" cruiser has Diesel engines that weigh 37 pounds per horsepower. It carries guns of 17-mile range, which could destroy all our cruisers quite easily, and our cruisers with short-range guns have engines that weigh more than 100 pounds per horsepower. Strange, but we still have something to learn apparently.

Sir James Jeans, whose works you should read, doesn't think anybody is living on the planets that accompany us through space, with the sun. He thinks life is scarce anywhere in the universe.

It is some comfort to know that there can't be any depression on Mars, Venus, Mercury, Jupiter, Saturn, Neptune, or little Eros since it takes foolish human beings to make a slump.

But science, in the near future, should be able to prove that there is consciousness, life, thought, purpose, in millions of other planets, perhaps on the sun itself. We can't imagine life at a temperature of fifty million degrees centigrade.

STEEL'S HEAD FLAYS WAGE CUTTERS

He and Schwab Insist the Pay Must Stay Up to Produce Prosperity

New York, May 22—James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corp., faced fellow executives of the steel industry today and charged that "the big standard companies" are not maintaining wage scales.

"I think," he said, "it's a pretty cheap sort of business."

Mr. Farrell's criticism of the companies was made at a private meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

"You say wages have been stabilized in the steel industry," Mr. Farrell began. "They have not. We are living in a fool's paradise. Honeycombing and pinching of all sorts of things have gone on. The so-called big standard companies—the companies in the headlines—are not maintaining the standard of wages.

"It's a shame that when some of the large companies are trying to maintain wages others are cutting them even when they are affording only three-day-a-week employment.

IT'S CHEAP BUSINESS

KAUFMAN CASH TO FAMILY

The entire estate of Mitchell B. Kaufman, whose body was found in the Quabog woods after a five months' search, is to be divided among the members of his family.

The will of the Boston rubber manufacturer was filed in Suffolk Probate Court today. It sets November 3, 1930, as the day he perished in the woods after becoming separated from his companions while on a hunting expedition.

His mother, Mrs. Rebecca Kaufman of 50 Russell st., Brookline, is named as the only beneficiary. For the joint use of his mother and his father, Solomon Kaufman, the deceased willed $25,000.

The residue of a large estate, the exact size of which is not indicated, is divided into fifths by the terms of Kaufman's will, which was made on July 3, 1928.

Four-fifths, in equal shares, go to his brother and sisters, David and Bessie Kaufman, Frances Sussman and Pearl Wechsler.

The fifth share is left in trust for the benefit of Kaufman's sister-in-law, Mrs. Annie Kaufman, of Chicago, her children, Ellen, David and Janice, the trust to be terminated when the youngest child reaches the age of 25, and the principal, with accumulated interest, to be divided among the children.

SLAIN BY THEIR FATHER

Leroy B. Skillings, 10, and his sister Catherine, 6, as shown in a snapshot taken last Sunday by a neighbor at the rear of the home in Dracut where they were beaten to death by their father. Catherine was on her way to her first communion at church, all dressed in white.

FATHER KILLS 2 IN DRACUT HAMMER ATTACK

Mother Dying at Lowell Hospital From Beating; Man Fails in Death Try

Dracut, May 22—Wielding a hammer in a jealous mad, Leroy Skillings, 35, beat his children to death today and battered their mother so severely that she is dying.

He then slashed his own wrists with a razor, but will recover to face a charge of murder, according to the police.

His wife, lying on what will probably be her deathbed at St. Joseph's Hospital in Lowell, was the husband of her former employer, jealous of her contact anywhere.

MOTHER DYING IN DEATH

The children, Leroy, six, and Catherine, 10, died of fractured skulls in the same hospital where surgeons battled to save their mother's life. In another room police were standing guard over their father.

The tragedy occurred at the Skillings home on Park ave., which was a scene of carnage when police entered in response to a call from a neighbor.

Police this afternoon said they had obtained admissions from Skillings that he attacked his wife because his jealousy overwhelmed him.

"Why did you kill the children?" he was asked.

"Because I didn't want them to go through life remembering I killed their mother," he said, according to the police.

GIRL TELLS OF ATTACK

"Daddy came into the room where mother and I were sleeping," she told police, who bent over her deathbed. "He told us to get up and go lie down beside brother in his bed.

"Then daddy stooped down, and I thought he was going to say some prayers. But he got up with a hammer in his hand."

Skillings was under observation for his sanity in April of this year after he drank poison in a suicide attempt, the police say. Police Chief John P. Carville said his idea that his wife was unfaithful was due to a mental twist.

STAGGERS FROM HOUSE

The hammer attack occurred about 4 o'clock this morning, at which time Albert Janes, 40, living next door, heard thuds and groans but decided it was a dog and went back to sleep.

Two hours later he went out into the backyard just in time to see Mrs. Nellie Skillings stagger from the house covered with blood.

The mother had regained consciousness after lying helpless for two hours. Janes laid her on the grass and called the police. An

NOBLE IS FOUND SANE, IS BELIEF

Lawrence, May 22—Indication that Russell Noble, 17-year-old alleged slayer, has been found sane by alienists was seen today in announcement by District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg, after reading the experts' report, that the boy will be arraigned Monday.

If found insane, the accused would not be arraigned on the murder charge in the ordinary course of events.

The alienists' report, which shapes the whole future of the alleged killer of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, wealthy Haverhill widow, was delivered to Judge Louis S. Cox in Superior Court today.

It is secret—impounded by order of Judge Cox—but was shown to Cregg and to defense counsel, Richard J. McCormick and Leo J. Finan, at a conference in the judge's lobby. State Detective Richard J. Griffin was present.

JURY PROBING WOOL 'FRAUD'

The federal grand jury, it was revealed today, is investigating to determine whether, in its opinion, the government has been defrauded by misleading claims of shrinkage in wool imports to Boston, center of the nation's wool trade.

Twenty men, leading figures in the trade, have been asked to appear at the office of United States District Attorney Frederick H. Tarr to supply any information they may have on the subject.

It was disclosed that secret investigation by Department of Justice agents has been going on for some time.

It is reported that requests were sent to the following firms to have representatives discuss the matter with the United States attorney:

Houghton Wool Co., 235 Summer st.; Ryder & Brown Co., 51 Melcher st.; Provost & Lefebvre & Co., 263 Summer st.; Cordingly & Co., 268 Summer st.; Chester S. MISSING TEA ROOM GIRL IS SOUGHT IN PUNCHARD CASE

TOLD FRIENDS SHE WAS GOING ON 'GOOD TIME'

Mysterious Brunette Known as "Helen" Believed to Be With Hunted Man

A mysterious "Helen," brunette tea room girl, was missing from Salem today, her disappearance coincident with that of Ralph A. Punchard, hunted bank official, executor and Chamber of Commerce treasurer.

She was one of two girls of that name in the life of Punchard, it was learned, the other being Helen Bedard, his housekeeper and reported fiance.

Meanwhile, police disclosed the first definite trace of the missing banker in a report that he boarded the 12:37 p. m. train for Boston a week ago yesterday, the day he disappeared.

He talked with two Salem business men on the trip, police admitted, but they refused to discuss it further. He either paid cash or used a commuter's ticket for no sale of a single ticket was made to him that day.

At the same time investigators, working on the many tangled angles of the case, estimated shortages in Punchard's accounts might reach $100,000. In addition to the Spinney estate, in which the discrepancy was placed at $60,000 in a partial check, other accounts which Punchard handled are believed to be short.

CITY FUNDS UNTOUCHED

A report that the Salem city funds were found short in a check-up at the bank was denied by President Josiah R. Gifford. He said the city account has been checked and found intact as well as many other accounts of depositors.

Rumors that the missing woman was Helen Barnard, Punchard's pretty 23-year-old housekeeper, were definitely spiked early today when police stated she was at her home and was not being sought.

The huge discrepancies uncovered yesterday in a preliminary survey of the documents in the estate of Mrs. Annie C. Spinney, which Punchard was sole and unbonded executor, will cause a complete check to be made among the legatees.

CASH NOT RECEIVED

Although 25 per cent of their legacies was supposed to have been turned over to all legatees, Atty. William G. Chapple, counsel for the heirs, stated the majority of them have received nothing.

J. Asbury Pitman, president of the Chamber of Commerce, confessed with police following a preliminary check of accounts which Punchard handled. He was reported as saying the shortage in these accounts may reach $10,000.

Punchard brokerage dealings with several prominent residents are also being probed and several funds with which Punchard is said to have been connected are being checked. These include those of the Sherwood st. Baptist Church, the North Shore Babies' Hospital and the Salem Welfare Board.

Punchard, who is being sought on both federal and state warrants has been missing a week. He is being sought by Department of Justice agents in New York and Chicago while local and state police are checking reports he is in hiding near Salem. Two persons have reported seeing him near Salem since his disappearance.

AUTOISTS LOSE COURT FIGHT

The fight of 1500 taxicab owners and hundreds of private car owners to block Motor Vehicle Registrar George A. Parker's calling in registration plates and certificates of machines insured in the Atlantic Mutual Casualty Insurance Company was lost today in Superior Court.

Judge Qua, in that court, denied a bill in equity brought by the Union Mutual Casualty Insurance Company seeking to enjoin the registrar from cancelling the registrations tomorrow unless new insurance is secured.

The Atlantic Mutual has been barred from doing business in Massachusetts, but the fight was waged on the fact that Registrar Parker had certified transfers of cars from the Union Mutual and the Hamilton Casualty Insurance Co. into the Atlantic Mutual without consent and signature of the insured.

Flier Wanted for Default Is Caught

Mark E. Ridge of Draper st., Dorchester, aviation enthusiast, who defaulted three months ago on charges of "leaving aircraft and performing an act of daring without authority," was captured today at the East Boston Airport as he was observing planes in action.

Ridge will be arraigned tomorrow. Three months ago Ridge parachuted from a National Guard observation airplane piloted by Lieut. Theodore Baker, landing on the ice over Charles River and arrested.

ambulance was sent, and as it started with her for Lowell Chief Carvilla and Patrolman Fred Herkimen entered the house.

Going into one of the bedrooms they found Skillings unconscious on the floor, his wrists slashed and a razor beside him. The little girl was unconscious on the bed in the same room, and the hammer was on the floor nearby.

The arms and hands of the children were bruised, showing how they had tried to ward off their father's vicious blows.

A second ambulance took the two children and their father to the hospital, where the boy died at 8 o'clock and his sister at 10:30. At the same time doctors held out no hope for the mother and nerveless that she retained consciousness and was able to make her dying statement to the police.

Skillings, police said, first attacked his wife, then the girl and boy. The fact that the boy was found in the living room is believed to indicate that he made a frantic effort to flee from the house as his father pursued him.

Mrs. Skillings made her statement in the presence of police to Miss Dorothy Briantie, stenographer in the district attorney's office, and a neighbor of the family.

She said she had left her husband several times, because of his false accusations, but neighbors had persuaded her to return.

Although he believes Skillings suffered periods of mental derangement, Chief Carvilla said he would place a murder charge against the man.

In March, 1930, the Skillings home was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. The bungalow was built on the same site. On April 8, this year, police say Skillings ran up to Patrolman John Linane in Lowell, crying that he had taken poison accidentally and Linane rushed him to a hospital in time to save his life.

ARMY AIRMEN SWOOP DOWN ON NEW YORK

One Plane in First Group to Arrive for the Maneuvers Cracks Up, Landing

New York, May 22—The vanguard of the army of the air, winging from Dayton, O., to defend New York against a mythical attack, landed at Roosevelt Field this afternoon.

One of 30 planes of the Seventh Army Squadron taxied too far in landing, and went over into a gully. The plane was damaged but the pilot, Lieut. W. C. Pyle of Marchfield, Cal., and his mechanic, escaped injury.

The first group dropped down out of a brilliant sky after circling high over the field, slighting in close formation on ground made hard by a hot sun. The squadron under the command of Maj. J. T. McNarney, flew here from Middletown, Pa., where it had halted for refueling after taking off with the army of war birds at Dayton early today.

The first group was quickly followed by groups from other points.

At noon the more than 500 planes had reached refueling points—Buffalo, Rochester, Washington, Middletown and Butler, Pa.—with but one minor accident. One plane was slightly damaged when it nosed over in landing at Rochester.

The four Long Island flying fields—Mitchel, Roosevelt, Curtiss and Fairchild airports—have been placed under military guard, and soldiers will live there in tents until the air games are over.

The city took advantage of the air corps presence in dedicating the new municipal airport in Barren island, Brooklyn, to be known as Floyd Bennet Field. The entire division flew over the field and shortly after 40 special planes demonstrated a sky war.

Points of vantage for the populace, including Commonwealth pier, Old Colony boulevard, South Boston, are expected to be crowded as the army takes an opportunity of citizenry to view the air battles.

The first planes are expected to arrive at East Boston airport Monday at 10 a. m.

FARRELL FLAYS WAGE CUTTERS

to embarrass you, but I think it's a pretty cheap sort of business."

Mr. Farrell said most steel companies would not earn their preferred dividends if the present situation continued.

"We are wasting millions of tons of raw material and getting no return," he asserted, and thought the industry should "take the risk of closing down" rather than continue to waste materials.

"We are no longer selling steel, but are accepting the prices the customers are willing to pay," he said. "We have to set up resistance against this move on the part of the buyer to ruin our business.

"You can't blame price cutting on the salesmen," he said. "It is the big chiefs in the organization who are doing the cutting. You have to blame the 'comrades' and they are sitting here in the front row. It is not honest for us to sell our steel below cost and knock something from our dividend and reduce wages.

"TARIFF NOT ENOUGH"

"I don't see any hope of better prices until the presidents of the companies stop the present diabolical situation."

Mr. Farrell referred to discussions on the "interference of the tariff walls" and added that "the stones for that wall have not even been quarried as yet."

Preservation of wages—the protection of the workers' payroll—"is a primary obligation in the steel industry," Charles M. Schwab, one of America's industrial giants and recognized spokesman of the steel industry, declared.

"In hours there our men have done the square thing by us," Schwab asserted. "We have not had strikes or unreasonable demands to disturb us when markets were good.

"We have not tried to take our loss of business out of the hide of the worker in dull times by reducing wage scales.

TWO GREAT FEARS

"This cooperation between management and workers has saved the steel industry hundreds of millions of dollars. It is an outstanding example of the ability of business leadership to cope with the problems of this industrial age.

"I am not attempting to speak for other lines of business. But preservation of the wage rate is a primary obligation in our business."

Schwab said there are, so far as he can see, only two clouds over America's business horizon, namely:

1. The fear on the part of millions of American families that there will be a cut in wages and a lowering of living standards.

2. The fear on the part of business men of the decline in the retail prices of goods.

When prices are cut to the point where they impair purchasing power, which consists of wages, profits, dividends and other forms of income, business men are "killing the goose that lays the golden egg," he declared.

Paramount-Publix Reduces Salaries

New York, May 22 (AP)—Paramount-Publix Corp. has notified employes throughout the country of a reduction in salaries ranging from 8 to 25 per cent, according to the salary. The notice said the cut affects employes from Adolph Zukor, president, down, and applies to executives under contract, who have voluntarily accepted. The new scale will remain in effect until at least Sept. 1, 1932, and is expected to save from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 annually.

EX-PROSECUTOR HELD AS KILLER OF EDITOR

Three Identify Clark as Slayer; Refuses to Talk on the Double Murder

Los Angeles, May 22 (AP)—As the door of a jail cell clanged shut upon Dayton H. Clark, former deputy district attorney, prosecuting authorities professed today to have reached a quick solution of the murder of Herbert Spencer, editor, and Charles Crawford, wealthy politician.

Clark was charged with the killings Wednesday in Crawford's real estate office, after surrendering and being quizzed for more than an hour by a squad of officers and attorneys, headed by District Attorney Buron Fitts.

Clark was later transferred to the county jail hospital for an examination into his sanity.

SURRENDERS ALONE

Shortly after being named in a statement by Fitts as the man wanted for the slayings, Clark telephoned the district attorney last night that he was about to surrender. Alone he drove to the prosecutor's office, ran a gauntlet of cameramen and reporters and disappeared behind the swinging doors of Fitts' chambers.

Clark refused to talk about the murder when reporters shot questions at him, and Fitts later said his former subordinate had likewise refused to make a statement under questioning. A murder charge was filed against Clark after he had been identified as the man who ran from Crawford's office after the shooting.

REFUSES TO TALK.

The district attorney said he had evidence that Clark purchased a .38 caliber pistol Tuesday. Police experts asserted .38 caliber bullets had killed Spencer, former police reporter and alleged "fixer" for persons accused of minor offenses, and Crawford, retired political "boss."

To all questions as to whether he committed the murders, or was in Crawford's office, Clark refused to comment.

"Will you say you did not kill them?" Fitts pressed.

"I don't want to say anything now," Clark replied.

The same answer accompanied a query as to why Clark had bought a revolver.

Fitts said Lucille Fisher, stenographer, and Ray Radke, Crawford's secretary, positively identified Clark as the man who was in conference with Crawford and Spencer.

Clark, a boyish-looking lawyer, just before his resignation in February, after eight years of service in the district attorney's office, prosecuted grand theft charges on which Daisy DeVoe, former secretary of Clara Bow, film star, was convicted and sentenced to 18 months in jail. He is a graduate of the University of Southern California and the United States Naval Academy.

It's a Question of Dirt With Mrs. Harriman

Washington, May 22 (INS)—What is a little matter of 5000 tons of red dirt between old friends?

Mrs. Harriman

Well, it's quite a lot of red dirt to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, and if it isn't handled carefully and quickly it is liable to break up her long-standing friendship with Raymond T. Baker, former director of the Mint.

Mrs. Harriman recently returned from Bermuda to find that red dirt on a little triangle where she had new top soil put for planting. The dirt was coming from the excavation for Baker's new $350,000 home nearby.

HOLIDAY IS DECLARED BY BRITONS

Entire Town Joins in Honoring Party; City Chief Is Given Scroll

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Boston, England, May 22—In a colorful Old World ceremony, Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, Mass. was welcomed by officials of this ancient town today on his arrival to repay the visit by the Lord Mayor of Boston, England, to Massachusetts last year.

Depressing weather and the fact Mayor Curley was an hour late failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the British Bostonians and they accorded the visiting American executive a tremendous ovation.

WHOLE TOWN JOINS

Sixteen miles outside of Boston on the London road, Mayor Curley was met by a fleet of cars containing officials of the local council and the entire delegation which visited Boston, Massachusetts, last year.

A local holiday had been declared in honor of the occasion, and virtually the entire population of the town turned out to pay homage to the visiting mayor. Six thousand children waving Union Jacks greeted the procession when it reached the flag-bedecked market place, and spectators along the entire route cheered as the line of cars proceeded through narrow twisting streets to the municipal buildings.

MAYOR IN HIS ROBES

Arriving at the city hall, Lord Mayor William Lunn and the lady mayoress received the Boston executive in their full robes of office. Mayor Curley was attired in a frock coat and top hat.

"This visit," said Lord Mayor Lunn, "sets the seal of joy on the most important event in the town of Boston for many, many years. I heartily welcome the mayor of our daughter city of the West."

A salvo of cheering lasting for a full two minutes greeted Mayor Curley as he began to respond to Mayor Lunn's speech.

"I believe," he said when silence was restored, "that this visit will promote a more idealistic conception of the duties of the English speaking nations toward one another."

At the conclusion of the official greeting, Mayor Curley inspected a guard of honor composed of war veterans and then proceeded to the council chamber, where he was accorded the freedom of the town and presented with an illuminated scroll enclosed in a finely decorated gilt casket.

DUNSTAN SAYS WIFE CURSED, BEAT HIM

A verbal picture of Mrs. Ruth Halpin Dunstan as a virago whose violent outbursts terrified her children was drawn today in Middlesex Probate Court by her husband, Capt. Edwin V. Dunstan, U. S. A.

Final arguments in the case began this afternoon.

MRS. EVANS' HOME

The name of Mrs. Glendower Evans was drawn into the case by John R. Markham, counsel for Capt. Dunstan. Mrs. Dunstan said that she had been invited with her children to share the home of Mrs Harold S. Teel in Brookline.

"Do you know," Markham asked, "that Mrs. Teel's house is owned by Mrs. Glendower Evans, said to have been interested in the Sacco-Vanzetti defense?"

Mrs. Dunstan replied that she knew nothing of the ownership of the house.

On the stand Dunstan declared he was many times forced to defend himself against physical violence.

"Her outbursts sometimes verged on hysteria," he testified. "They started usually from insignificant things, such as a letter from my mother, whom my wife detested.

"On such occasions she would work herself up from irritability to rages of such violence that the two children would cower together in a corner, their arms around each other, while my wife abused me with torrents of profanity and obscenity which had a terrible effect on the children."

FEARED FOR CHILDREN

Capt. Dunstan's words became almost inaudible, and he seemed on the verge of a collapse. Markham asked him repeatedly to raise his voice.

"It was terrible," Capt. Dunstan replied, "I love my children, and it was agony to me to hear the terrible accusations she made against me in their presence."

Questioned regarding his treatment of the children, Beitzy, 3, and Virginia, 6, Capt. Dunstan denied indignantly that he had ever mistreated.

"I used to bathe them when my wife was away. I heard their prayers, and saw that they were given their breakfast and started for school before I went on duty for the day," he said.

WILL FIGHT FOR THEM

"I have them with me at West Point now, and no children at the post are better cared for, as anyone there will testify."

Capt. Dunstan declared that, should the children be taken from him by the probate court he would carry an appeal for their custody to a higher tribunal.

"I feel that I am better qualified to care for them than is my wife," he said.

The sudden disappearance of Joseph Pelletier, Salem lawyer, was revealed when he failed to answer a charge of attack on a girl in Salem court. A search for him was begun in Boston.

Pelletier was ordered defaulted and a default warrant was issued for his arrest by Judge George B. Bean.

He was charged with attacking Rose Fortin of Gardner st., Salem, while a visitor at the latter's home and was on bail of $1000.

A week ago today the case was continued when Pelletier was reported ill, but he appeared a short time later at the Salem police station and was taken to Newburyport where an indictment was reported on the same charge.

Armed with the default warrant, police started in search of him today, but were told that he has not been seen for several days. His home is on Ocean ave., Salem.

100 ROUTED BY 'L' TRAIN FIRE

Over a hundred passengers on an inbound Forest Hills Elevated train were ordered from the cars at Northampton station today when a short circuit in the wires under the second car threw off a cloud of smoke and sparks.

The trainmen and passengers were unaware of the excitement the smoking trains caused in Washington st. until a tower man at Dudley st. station telephoned ahead to halt the train.

The passengers were ordered out at Northampton station and the four-car train, still smoking, was rerouted over the Broadway loop to Atlantic ave.

MACY ATTACKS TAMMANY

New York, May 22 (AP)—W. Kingsland Macy, Republican state chairman, says Tammany Hall is pleading guilty to charges against it by its tactics in blocking the city investigation.

Addressing the New York County organization at Palm Garden last night, he said a big revolt was imminent, because people were tiring of Democratic rule.

Tammany, he charged, was a past master at diverting attention from itself "when its iniquities are exposed," and "it is a specialist in insidiously working its way into independent groups for the purpose of turning them to Tammany's own advantage."

Every city employe, Macy declared, was a tool of the machine, to do as he is bid.

"Criticism of city affairs," he continued, "has been met by bitter attacks on men who made it —seldom if ever by a fair refutation of the charges."

FAMILY 'PAWN' IN TOWN 'SPITE'

Charge that he and his family are being made "goats" in a spite case between Wellesley and Weymouth was made today by Alfred Blaisdell, head of the family recently ordered to leave Weymouth.

Blaisdell and his family of five are now living in the women's detention room in the basement of Wellesley town hall, temporary quarters provided by the town when they returned to Wellesley after being exiled from Weymouth.

"The whole trouble," said Blaisdell, "is that this is a spite case between the towns of Wellesley and Weymouth, and I am being made the goat.

"Weymouth wanted to get rid of me with the excuse that I had complained about the aid which the town gave my family. I never received any financial aid from Weymouth."

Blaisdell said that Wellesley gives him $15 a week and that he receives $13 a week compensation for the loss of one hand in an accident.

This supports him, his crippled wife and the four children, Alfred, Jr., 15; Francis, 6; Alfreda, 11, and Bertha, 8.

By virtue of his office as an incorporator, Mr. Geary was a member of the Supreme Council of the order and had attended every supreme convention.

He was looking forward to the next convention which is to be held in French Lick Springs, Ind., in August and had often expressed the hope that he would live to attend the 50th convention.

I., who drove a car which killed a father of six children here on April 6, pleaded guilty to drunken driving, driving to endanger and leaving the scene of an accident and was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction in Superior Court today.

The automobile was owned by Miss Elinor Daugherty, 25, an attorney, of Cambridge, who, with Perrin Young of Malden, was a passenger at the time of the accident.

PEEPER ARREST AT WELLESLEY

A search of several weeks for a "peeper" who had been annoying Wellesley College girls was disclosed today in the announcement of the arrest of a Framingham man on the campus.

At the end of a two weeks' vigil, Patrolman Arthur W. McBurney of the Wellesley police last night arrested Harold C. Schleicher, 23, who gave his occupation as salesman and a Framingham hotel as his address.

Officer McBurney, patroling the campus at request of college authorities, seized Schleicher after two college girls had fled to him and complained that a man had accosted them.

Schleicher was given a suspended sentence of two months and placed on probation for one year at a private session in Dedham district court today after he pleaded not guilty to the charge.

PLAN TO AMEND OLD AGE BILL

An amendment to the old age assistance bill, providing for financing through an increase in the State inheritance tax, will be offered by Rep. Owen A. Gallagher of Dorchester on Monday, when the bill again comes up for finance consideration.

Under Gallagher's amendment the minimum tax of 1 per cent would be increased to 1½ per cent, and the maximum would be raised from 15 per cent to 16 per cent.

He figures that about $3,000,000 a year would be realized, sufficient to finance the old age assistance act.

CONTRACTS FOR ROADS 100 P. C.

Washington, May 22 (AP)—An increase of 100 per cent in the value of state highway contracts awarded in April as compared with the same month last year was announced today by the President's Emergency Employment Committee.

The American Association of State Highway Officials informed Acting Chairman Croxton of the committee that 40 states let contracts in April for 7296 miles of road at $96,879,466. This was twice the amount contracted for April a year ago an did not include contracts totaling several million dollars for bridge construction.

From the Labor Department came reports that building permits issued during April gained 8.2 per cent in value over March from 340 cities.

Workers employed upon road work in April totalled 193,907 as compared with 192,000 the previous month. Croxton said the increased contract awards would bring further employment in May.

'BOSTON' MAN IS UNKNOWN HERE

He told doctors he lived on Huntington ave., Back Bay, and was a physician, but no doctor by that name is registered in the directory or with the State Board of Registration in Medicine.

He was found on a roadway and remained in a coma for several hours.

The victim, who has well defined recollections of his last conscious moments, told police he checked out of a San Francisco hotel and started to drive north. He had $215 in cash in his wallet.

On the road he picked up a stranger seeking a lift. While crossing San Francisco bay on the ferry the stranger offered him a drink and a few moments later, the victim related, he felt dizzy. His last recollection is that of the stranger reaching over to take the wheel of the car.

500 KILLED IN BURMA REVOLT

Simla, India, May 22 (AP)—Nearly 500 persons are reported to have been killed and thousands wounded or captured in the current insurrection in Burma against British authority.

American missionaries returning here say that the rebellion is in danger of spreading from southern Burma, its starting point, throughout the country and that colonial officials are rushing fresh troops from India into the upper section.

MAN INJURED BY FREAK CRASH

A combination of other people's accidents today sent Arthur Morton, 50, of Arden st., Roslindale, to City Hospital with concussion of the brain and severe contusions of the neck.

Allen T. Oakley of Cambridge, driving a light truck, tried to pass another truck at Milk and Broad sts. In the confusion of traffic both trucks were crowded to the sidewalk, and one of the trucks struck the counterbalance of a fire escape on a corner building.

The fire escape lowered, and Morton, standing beneath it, was knocked to the ground.

SLAVE SUSPECT GIVEN 5 YEARS

In spite of a plea for leniency from his counsel, William H. Lewis, Harry Malaga, alleged white slaver, was given a sentence of 5 years in Atlanta penitentiary and fined $1000 on a charge of transporting Elizabeth Martin from Pottstown, Pa., to Boston for immoral purposes.

Through his counsel Malaga appealed the case and was held in $5000 bonds.

Malaga was drawn into the investigation of the murder of Samuel Reinstein in the Back Bay in January, 1930. He was questioned regarding a report that he had driven the car from which Reinstein was shot, and held in $5000 bail.

When he was released on bond, he was immediately rearrested by federal agents on the Mann Act charge.

Before his arraignment in federal court, he married the Martin girl and blocked her possible testimony against him. When the marriage was revealed, Judge James A. Lowell branded him "a liar and a coward," and also delivered a verbal lashing to Lewis, his counsel.

Today, in his appeal for mercy for his client, Lewis said:

"It was unjust and venomous to persecute Malaga with accusations that he was involved in the Reinstein murder. He came here voluntarily to tell what he knew about the case, and helped the government in every way possible."

ONE U. S. MAYOR 'DRY' IN FRANCE

Le Havre, France, May 22 (INS) Determined to "uphold the Constitution of the United States" on foreign soil as well as at home, Mayor and Mrs. John C. Porter of Los Angeles refused today to participate in the "vin d'honneur" (wine of honor) ceremony staged for the group of visiting American mayors by French officials at the Havre city hall.

"I understand I am the only 'dry' on the trip," Mayor Porter said after he had walked out of the salon of the city hall.

"Let the others drink all they please, but my wife and I intend to uphold the Constitution of the United States. We shall not drink a drop during the entire trip."

Mayor Metcalfe of Omaha, Neb., drank the toast, then turned to newspaper men.

"I'd like to make a statement about this incident," he said, "I detest champagne myself, but both Mrs. Metcalfe and I drank this toast because we felt it with all our hearts."

STRIKERS BACK IN CHICAGO

Chicago, May 22 (AP)—Four thousand striking city employes were ordered back to work today after Mike Carrozza, union leader, had conferred with Mayor Anton J. Cermak.

Street sweepers, water pipe extension laborers, street repairmen, section foremen, truck owners, drivers and teamsters walked out because, Carrozza said, the mayor had discharged 600 union men and replaced them with political supporters.

The mayor denied that he had hired non-union workers or had discharged 600 union men. He added that further disputed points would be ironed out Monday at a conference.

SUICIDE OF CAPUCCIO FOLLOWED THREAT BY RACKET AGENT

Well, three months ago there arrived in Boston a mysterious but fear-inspiring figure who is playing an important part in the present underworld battle. He came here from Chicago after telephoned word to the Bay State political power, who has protected bootlegging here, that he was Al Capone's man.

But the stranger, a Sicilian, who uses the odd name of Joe Chicoby, which is not his own, also carried the recommendation of Ciro Terranova of the Bronx, New York, a mighty man in the New York rackets. The combination of Capone and Terranova allied behind a man might, incidentally, interest New York sleuths and federal agents.

And while chronicling the arrival of visiting "muscle men," let me publicly record for the first time that "Legs" Diamond, New York gang chief, who has been busy stopping bullets lately, has also been represented in the Boston scramble during the past two months.

BAD FOR DIAMOND

Paul Quattrachi and Jerry Scaccio, two of Diamond's chief lieutenants, and two other members of the Diamond gang, arrived here early in March and registered at a Tremont st. hotel. At first they explained they merely came up to see the Tony Canzoneri-Sammy Fuller fight at the Boston Garden on March 6. But they stayed on about 10 days.

In reality they were here to negotiate the running of booze and drugs to Diamond's camp at Acra in the Catskills. And they made contacts that were to bring further misfortune to Diamond.

I reveal also today the system by which liquor is purchased by the rival gangs in St. Pierre, Miquelon, brought to rum row and run ashore in the glim of the moon. An interesting story, of which more later.

WAR CHEST BARED

In previous stories I explained how a new organization, using modern high-powered business methods, had served notice on a prominent politician and guardian angel of gangsters that it was taking over the New England liquor traffic.

I told of its $500,000 war chest, borrowed in Boston from reputable financiers with no security except the fact that the borrowers were "right." And how the organization, backed by "Owney" Madden, New York big shot, and New Jersey interests had caused the arrest of "Big John" Magnus, favored Boston rum runner, and the seizure of several loads of his liquor, together with boats, trucks and firearms.

But to unfold the tragic suicide of the popular Capuccio. It was misfortune to run afoul of the mysterious Joe Chicoby. Just how is not known.

Last night it was whispered that Capuccio had innocently stumbled on the fact that Chicoby has been busy organizing the "alky" cookers of the North End, Chelsea and Revere.

CHICOBY ANGERED

But whatever the cause, Chicoby took the first occasion to voice his wrath against Capuccio, and perhaps Capuccio exaggerated the depth of the Sicilian's wrath.

Capuccio's only known open clash with the Capone representative occurred during a party early in April at a Back Bay hotel, at which, as is common in these democratic times, prominent citizens of upper and under worlds were present.

Chicoby had been drinking and was ugly. He made his way to Capuccio and started sputtering at him in Italian. The Chicago man apparently thought he had a grievance against Capuccio, who made frantic replies, also in Italian.

The argument grew hotter, and suddenly Chicoby drew a stiletto and, placing the point against the other man's breast, delivered a hissing threat. Capuccio turned pale with fright. Chicoby put away his knife, and his companions hustled him to another part of the room.

TOLD OF THREATS

Capuccio, born in Naples, Italy, said the Chicago man was a Sicilian and that he had threatened the former hotel man. He was badly shaken and left the gathering a short time later. It was believed this terror finally shattered him and drove to yesterday's mad act.

The appearance in Boston of Quattrochi and Scaccio was a bad blunder on the part of Diamond. It put him in wrong again with Owney Madden, the most powerful of the underworld barons of New York. Because, unluckily, Diamond chose to ally himself with the Magnus syndicate, against which Madden is warring.

Once "Legs" was protected by Owney because of his former membership in the old West Side gang which Madden captained. In the last few years Madden thought Diamond was becoming too progressive and took several plays away from him.

When Diamond established his headquarters in Northern New York where he began to levy tribute on the countryside, like a robber chieftain of old, he decided to procure a Boston hookup for dope and liquor.

Dope from the New England seaboard was to be sent to Lawrence, a prominent distributing point, for transshipment to Acra. The liquor would ride over the road under guard.

DICKERED WITH MAGNUS

Quattrochi and Scaccio eventually arrived here. I learned they stopped at a Tremont st. hotel while they were closing the deal with the Magnus crowd, believed to be in control. At that time the rival organization had not begun to show it's real power, and "Big John" was apparently sitting pretty.

The Diamond men mingled freely with Boston racketeers while here. And Quattrochi sat behind Canzoneri in his fight with Fuller.

It was about this time that some of the "Big Shots" were "shaken" for bankrolls under threat of death. One prominent sporting character was held a prisoner over a week-end, and worked on until he was roughly convinced of the desirability of giving up "dough."

On the following Monday morning he was driven to his bank where he signed a check for 25 grand. His "friends" cashed the check, and carefully stowing away the money, suggested that he remain inside for 15 minutes, which he was only too glad to do. They left the bank and he has not seen them since.

WAS DIAMOND TRICK

In the underworld it is believed by many that Diamond's men introduced the new racket to this city, and there is some question as to extending them a vote of thanks. It has been a tough winter and a lot of the boys have been "on the nut" for months.

The modus operandi of rum running, as I learned it, deals with the shipment of liquor from St. Pierre on the island of Miquelon, a French possession off the New Brunswick coast.

There are three firms at St. Pierre which practically control the export of liquor. They are the Atlantic Export Co., Franco-American Export Co., and Brunsafford Bros., of New York.

MAGNUS MONOPOLY

Magnus and the rival organization have a monopoly on the business done by these firms, as they pay better prices. They also have superior equipment for handling the stuff, and keep men on the field all the time. These agents communicate with their bosses by means of a telegraphic code, and handle all shipments.

Everything is on the "up and up" at St. Pierre. The liquor concerns refuse to take a chance on shipping out anything that is wrong, for fear of losing their permits. Everything they put out is properly manifested, generally being consigned to the Bahamas and usually to Nassau.

In time of stress or storm, if government officials board any of the craft carrying liquor outside the 12-mile zone, they never find anything wrong.

I'M ALONE APPEARS

The average load is 2500 cases, although more have been carried on schooners and 125 footers. I'm Alone, formerly owned by John Magnus and eventually sunk in the Gulf of Mexico, was considered one of the smartest looking and best equipped rum carriers in the trade. The first time she showed up in the fleet on rum row, under a skipper who took pride in showing off his craft, she created a sensation.

In those days the runners were using old three masters without kickers, and I'm Alone, with her trig appearance and powerful engines, gave them a severe pain.

To add to the discomfiture of the rummies, "Big John" and a party of guests, all correctly attired in yachting costume, visited his ship and spent the day.

The first signs of animosity began to be directed against Magnus at this time, to be increased by the appearance of Peg I and later by Peg II, said to have been the finest contact boat ever built for the liquor trade.

SPEED HELPED OUT

The contact boats were so much faster than anything else at that time that Magnus' men got their liquor ashore ahead of the others, and then began to appropriate their "drops" or landing places.

Furthermore "Big John's" fast boats carried 400 cases, and Peg II could do 42 miles an hour with such a load, while the other craft had space for only about 50 cases.

All the boats were equipped with short wave radio sets hooked up to collapsible antennae, through which communication was established with shore stations.

When a favorable night arrived, following the appearance of the carrier on rum row, word was flashed ashore to send a certain number of beach men to a certain "drop" to stand by for an unloading.

Men and trucks would be on hand at the designated spot, with sufficient of the latter to split up the liquor in comparatively small lots. There were usually six men to a truck, two on and two to carry.

The trucks were sent away at about 15-minute intervals, so that the danger of them all being knocked off was minimized.

The load was then taken to a warehouse for distribution later in automobiles.

WALCOTT 'CHAT' WITH ROOSTERS TOLD IN TRIAL

Cryptic eulogies over the graves of his family and "confidential chats" with his roosters were indulged in by John Walcott, Natick shoe manufacturer, whose will is under fire of his daughter in Middlesex court.

At least that was the testimony today of Clement Vadja, gardener on the Walcott estate, who was called by Mrs. Madeline Walcott Sanborn, the daughter.

Charging unsoundness of mind and undue influence, Mrs. Sanborn, former Parisian actress, now of Brookline, seeks to break the $1,000,000 will in which she was left $125,000 in trust.

"I was feeding the poultry one day," Vadja testified, "and I heard Mr. Walcott's voice saying, 'you are good birds and you all are worth $40 apiece. Martin's a damn thief.

"I looked up and saw Mr. Walcott talking to the roosters."

Asked the identification of the Martin referred to, Vadja said he was a poultry dealer who frequently bought roosters from Walcott.

Describing a visit with Walcott to a cemetery, he said the millionaire manufacturer stood in front of the Walcott lot and commented in eulogies on the deceased members of the family.

"There is the smartest one of them all," he quoted Walcott as saying when he pointed to the grave of John Walcott, an uncle.

Sweeping his arm toward a section where near relatives were buried, Walcott said, "There lie all the damn fool Walcotts," Vadja testified.

Under questioning of Atty. Robert T. Bushnell, counsel for Mrs. Sanborn, the gardener said Walcott often talked to himself when alone; was "close" with money and often complained he could not afford certain things, including a new lawn mower.

Mother and Her Son Fined in Rum Case

A mother and her son were sentenced and fined together today in Charlestown court on charges of keeping and exposing liquor for sale.

Mrs. Jennie Campbell of Chapman st., Charlestown, was sentenced to four months in the House of Correction and fined $400. Linus Campbell, 22, was sentenced to one month and fined $200. Both appealed and were held in bail for Superior Court.

GIFT OF BRIDGE PUZZLES N. H.

Walpole, N. H., May 22—A belated donation of a $68,000 bridge puzzled authorities today in a doubt that they could legally accept it.

The first inkling of the gift came yesterday when Charles N. Vilas of Alstead gave a bank cashier $100,000 in bonds to pay for the structure and withdrew $30,000 when he was told the correct cost.

To determine the legality of the offer, inasmuch as the new bridge has already been paid for, Atty. Philip Faulkner of Keene conferred with State authorities at Concord today.

The bridge extends over the Connecticut river between Walpole and Bellows Falls, Vt.

The gift has already been accepted by authorities of Bellows Falls, Rockingham, and Walpole.

Two of Mrs. Myerick's daughters married into the peerage. One is helping to run her "Country Club" at Maidenhead with the aid of her husband, the Earl of Kinnoul.

WIFE TO ALIBI 'GUN-PETTER' SUSPECT

Mrs. James Gordon McCray, wife of the 30-year-old manager of a Lynn store who last Saturday was arraigned as the "petting gunman" who had attacked and held up two girls while driving them home from a dance, will furnish an alibi for him, it was learned today.

Loyal to her husband, she is prepared to testify that McCray was at home reading a paper at quarter of 11 when she retired for bed.

The case, which was to go to trial next Tuesday, will be postponed until June 30, it is believed. Mrs. McCray is to go to a hospital where her baby will be born.

One consultation has already been held between Judge George R. Sears, Salem police and Neal J. Murphy of Lynn, counsel for McCray, for agreement on the trial date.

The importance of Mrs. McCray's testimony was stressed and defense counsel indicated that June 30 would be the date of the trial.

McCray, who lives in Swampscott, a successful merchant, was identified in Salem Hospital by Inez Smith, 19, East Collins st., and Margaret Richards, 20, Norman st., both of Lynn, as the man who drove them home from a dance and later attacked them.

English Girl Breaks Down Barriers of Royal Academy

London, May 22 (INS)—For the first time in 100 years a woman architect has been admitted to the art school of the royal Academy.

Her struggle to enter the profession has aroused the admiration of London's art world.

She studied architecture at night school and used to rise at 6 o'clock in the morning to sketch before going to work. It took her a year to get a job in an architect's office at $3 a week.

"I finally decided to have a shot at the Royal Academy," Miss Causey told an interviewer. "I had to design a market place suitable for a town in Gloucestershire," she said. "My plans were approved and I am taking a five years' course at the academy."

TOSCANINI IS GUARDED BY 8

Milan, Italy, May 22 (AP)—Two soldiers and half a dozen detectives have been posted as a guard outside the home of Arturo Toscanini, orchestral conductor, who was assaulted at Bologna recently because he refused to lead his orchestra in the Fascist anthem.

Last night a group of students staged a hostile demonstration outside the house, chanting the news that Toscanini's passport has been temporarily suspended by the government. It is expected, however, that the suspension will be lifted within a day or so.

GANDHI UPSETS JUNE DATE FOR INDIA PARLEY

Simla, India, May 22 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi again has upset the machinery of the British empire by refusing to go to London for a meeting of the Federal Structures Committee, as suggested by the British Cabinet.

The leader of the Indian Nationalists notified Lord Willingdon, Viceroy of India, today he could not possibly be in London in June 29 before the Hindu-Moslem communal problem is solved and all conditions of the Delhi armistice have been carried out.

Efforts at once were started to alter his decision, but those who know him say he is not likely to change his mind.

Gandhi was represented as feeling his presence in India now is imperative if all terms of the Delhi truce are to be enforced and if the existing breach between the Hindus and Moslems is to be healed.

The question of the date of the next structures committee meeting and the full session of the round table conference has been thrown into confusion. A majority of the delegates favored September for the committee session and November for the round table conference.

It generally is believed if the June date is unacceptable to Gandhi Premier MacDonald will postpone the committee meeting, because no constitution evolved by the structures committee can be representative without this spokesman of the Indian masses.

CUBAN REVOLT HEADS DEFIED BY MACHADO

Havana, May 22 (AP)—Order reigned throughout Cuba today after 24 hours of uncertainty which threatened to bring about a national crisis.

Machado, grizzled veteran of the wars of liberation, has accepted the revolutionary challenge and defied his enemies to unseat him.

Rumors of revolutionary uprisings in Oriente Province, where tension has been high for more than a month, due chiefly to the alleged brutality of military authorities, caused general concern until it was ascertained the rumors were exaggerated.

Student leaders and men prominent in the opposition ranks, including Col. Carlos Penate, president of the Nationalists, and Mario G. Menocal, former president of the republic, have freely predicted revolution is imminent and the government has taken extraordinary precautions to insure order.

The opposition is determined to secure its three main objectives: Constitutional reforms, a new census, and new elections in 1932; but says it would also like a few other concessions, including the resignation of the president and the establishment of a provisional government.

GERMANS FIGHT SOVIET RADIO

Berlin, May 22 (INS)—A radio war is being waged between Germany and Soviet Russia.

The Russian long-wave radio stations regularly broadcast propaganda lectures on Soviet Russia, preferably in German, for the "Fatherland of the Workers" and urge German workers to come to and work in Soviet Russia.

The German government started a counter-propaganda by sending out lectures on the situation in Soviet Russia, warning German workers from going to Russia or expecting it to be a paradise. Many German workers, these lectures claim, came back from Russia totally broke.

Bond & Mortgage Receiver Named

Chicago, May 22 (AP)—Judge James H. Wilkerson appointed the Chicago Title & Trust Co. receiver for the American Bond & Mortgage Co. today.

Application for a receivership was made by H. T. Clarke, a creditor. The company's affairs were placed in charge of the protective committees in August, 1929. The company consented to the receivership.

$17,757,000 IN HOSPITAL WORK

Washington, May 22 (AP)—President Hoover announced today that the estimated cost of construction approved by the Federal Board of Hospitalization would total $17,757,000.

New construction approved some time ago and now under contract amounts to $7,092,192.37.

The projects for which contracts have not been let, but which have been approved by the Board of Hospitalization, include Togus, Me., $750,000; Rutland, Mass., $150,000, and Newington, Ct., $137,000.

Projects have been approved and are now under contract at a number of places, among them Newington, Ct.

The estimates include all manner of building activities, ranging from refrigeration and tile floors to new buildings.

Slayer Hanged, Woman Set Free

Mont Laurier, Que., May 22 (AP)—Edouard Thomas, 25, woodsman, was hanged today for the murder of Arthur Nantel, restaurant-keeper of L'Annonciation, last September.

Mrs. Nantel, accused with Thomas, was acquitted in a separate trial.

7 INJURED IN AN AUTO CRASH

Rehoboth, May 22 (AP)—Seven persons were injured, two seriously, when a sedan crashed into a disabled truck parked by the highway here today.

Mrs. Mary Lazaro, 42, of Bridgewater, and her daughter, Palmira, 15, who were being driven home from Providence, R. I., were taken to the Morton Hospital at Taunton suffering from bruises and possible internal injuries.

Joseph Marquis of Bridgewater, the driver of the sedan, was discharged from the hospital after being treated for bruises. Four younger Lazaro children were bruised, but did not require treatment. The sedan was damaged.

Chicago Seeks Both Party Conventions

Chicago, May 22 (INS)—Chicago today began its campaign to bring the national conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties to this city in 1932, following action by Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association of Commerce, in appointing a committee of 120 to handle negotiations.

Adequate convention facilities, housing accommodations and parking spaces have been found. The committee will open negotiations immediately with party leaders.

Boston is pleased to hear that a great steamship line thinks of starting and stopping there, making Boston their headquarters, instead of New York, to save time across the ocean.

Philadelphia is grateful to its distinguished citizen, Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, for organizing business men, and raising money, to establish a steamship service between Philadelphia and Liverpool, Manchester, and continental ports.

Governor Roosevelt, of New York, traveling abroad, discovers that French agriculture and industry balance each other, and minimize any slump.

The French mechanic, unable to find work at his trade, goes to work on the farm of an uncle or other relative.

More than six million Frenchmen own the land for which they recently fought so well.

Idle workers of the world now number 20,000,000, according to the international labor office located at Geneva. A year ago the idle were only 10,000,000. The League of Nations observes that Russia is the exception, always seeking more workers, with no worry at all about unemployment.

Our government should get over its boyish prejudice, and send somebody to Russia to find out how it is done.

The government will abandon 53 army posts, largely obsolete, to save money.

Government might also get rid of its military "gee-gees," or cavalry, keeping one stuffed specimen in the Smithsonian Institution, next the dinosaur, for the information of those interested.

We have refused to develop airplanes properly, or to allow such men as Gen. Mitchell to show what airplanes can do against warships, because the government didn't want to hurt the feelings of shipbuilders, armor plate makers, builders of docks, etc.

Must we also keep thousands of ridiculous horses, with men riding around on them, in order to give the farmers a chance to sell a few oats?

Mr. Coleman Cox, who writes from time to time, as the spirit moves him, says, among other things: "The secret of success is hard work.

"Maybe that is why it has remained a secret to so many."

Conditions in the next few months will compel a good many to become familiar with that gloomy secret that never hoped or wanted to know it.

HEARING JUNE 12 TO NAME GUARDIAN

Judge Arthur W. Dolan in Suffolk Probate Court today set June 12 for the hearing of a petition to appoint a guardian for Dr. Mary E. Jones, descendant of a Revolutionary family, now a patient at the Boston State Hospital.

R. Murray Pahlinki, assistant corporation counsel for the city, now serving as temporary conservator of her estate, asked the court to be relieved of his duties.

The petition was filed after Dr. James V. May, superintendent of the hospital, informed the court that in his opinion Dr. Jones is mentally unbalanced.

The home of teh aged recluse in James st., South End, was raided by health authorities on May 12 after neighbors had complained of sanitary conditions in the house.

In the raid the officers liberated 32 cats and dogs. Dr. Jones' only companions in her 14-room house. For many of the pets, born in the house, their trip to the shelter of the Animal Rescue League was their first sight of the outdoors.

Radio Loud Speaker to End Shortage of English Clergy

London, May 22 (AP)—Substitution of a loud speaker for the minister in some churches was reported by the Daily Mail today to be under consideration by bishops of the Church of England. Inasmuch as there is a serious shortage of clergy it has been suggested that services in certain churches be broadcast, with the hope that congregations would join in the prayers and responses as though they were led by a clergyman.

Found asleep behind the wheel of an automobile early today by Cambridge police, Arthur A. Mitchell, a paroled convict, was remanded to Concord Reformatory after pleading guilty to four charges of automobile violations.

In court at East Cambridge Mitchell pleaded guilty to operating an uninsured automobile, operating a machine after the registration had been revoked, operating without a license and operating an unregistered automobile.

WOMAN WANTS MONEY BACK IN BURIAL ERROR

The House Ways and Means Committee today wrestled with one of the strangest cases of mistaken identity ever presented before the Legislature.

On May 3, 1926, it was brought out, Mrs. Lucy Blanchette of Holyoke was notified by the State Department of Correction that her son, "inmate" of the Bridgewater State Hospital, had died.

The body was buried by Mrs. Blanchette at an expense of $170. Later it was discovered that, although the dead man's name was Blanchette, he was not the son of Mrs. Blanchette of Holyoke.

Mrs. Blanchette's son bears the name of Gustave and is still living.

The body that the correction authorities shipped to Holyoke was that of Augustive Blanchette and the error of notification and shipment was that of the state department's.

Now Mrs. Blanchette, who resides in the Old Ladies' Home in Holyoke, asks that the state reimburse her for the money she spent in burying a stranger.

Two Trouser Suits and Four Piece Sport Suits

Today, an impossibility for many years becomes a reality! Today, for the first time since 1921, the cream of America's blue-blood fabrics tailored in brisk English fashions, are presented at $25 with two trousers. Most stores would label this a "sensational sale". We consider it just another example of how much more we can save for our customers because we make the clothes we sell • • We're proud of the character of these Two Trouser Suits. In their luxury of fabric, their distinguished styles, and their custom-type needling, they are exact counterparts of the costly clothes which for years have been displayed along the upper reaches of New York's exclusive Fifth Avenue. They have the "made-for-me-look" of custom-tailored suits. And they'll hold a sharp crease for a long time • • There are sizes to fit everybody; and a full range of colors for late Spring and early Summer wear. And remember, two trousers with every suit.

HOW AIR ATTACK COULD CRIPPLE U. S. IS TOLD

By GEN. WILLIAM MITCHELL, Former Commander Air Forces A. E. F. and Director Military Aeronautics, U. S. Army.

Copyright, 1931, by N. Y. American, Inc. and Universal Service, Inc.

Chicago, May 22—Our Air Division, holding its exercises over Chicago, has been given a military situation by the War Department.

Theoretically we have been passed from a time of peace to a state of war. The Panama Canal has been destroyed, presumably by a couple of hostile bombers dropping 2000-pound bombs into one of the canal locks. The canal is out of commission for months.

The enemy is reported to be approaching our shores with a fleet consisting of airplane carriers, naval war vessels and transports carrying troops. Canada is neutral. By the terms of this situation, the American navy, stationed in the Pacific is eliminated and the responsibility for the defense of the country falls on the air force.

VULNERABLE AREA.

Our vulnerable area is contained in the triangle, Boston-Chicago-Washington. In this district lie approximately two-thirds of our population, two-thirds of our wealth, two-thirds of our factories. The distance by air from New York to Chicago is about 711 miles, from Washington to Chicago about 600 miles, from Boston to Chicago about 850 miles. Washington is about 400 miles from Boston, with New York in between.

Airplanes with a speed of 200 miles an hour could reach any part of this area within about three hours from our coast lines.

If the evacuation of New York, Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston were forced by air attack this nation could no longer continue a war, as millions of people would be driven into the open country without proper housing, food, medical supplies, sanitary arrangements or transportation. The cities noted above are only nine in number. A very few gas bombs dropped on them would cause their evacuation.

DEFENSE MISSION

It is the mission, then, of the defending air force to protect the triangle Boston-Washington-Chicago. If the enemy has unrestricted access with his bombing planes to this area, the war would be over in a week.

The present problem merely involves the location and destruction of enemy vessels. The air force therefore will establish a line of observation out from our coast and will first locate the hostile airplane carriers. These can easily be sunk with the present force available. Next in importance will be the warships and the transports.

HOOVER FINDING COST PRUNING A HARD JOB

Washington, May 22 (INS)—President Hoover is experiencing what might be termed tough going in his efforts to prune expenditures to conform with income.

Despite a series of conferences on various departmental budgets, the economies thus far envisioned have proved extremely small in relation to the prospective treasury deficit of approximately $1,000,000,000.

The present machinery of the federal government is geared to the income of prosperous times, and it doesn't easily accommodate itself to the reduced income brought about by the depression.

Early tomorrow the President takes the administrative personnel of the Post Office Department to Rapidan for week-end conferences as to whether any money can be saved in the operation of the mails. The prospect admittedly is not alluring. The postal deficit this year is estimated at about $140,000,000, mostly attributable to the air mail and ocean mail subsidies.

NEWBURYPORT GIRL IS QUIZZED IN CROOK HUNT

Newburyport, May 22—A pretty Newburyport girl, who left home with her sister for New York only 10 days ago to "make good in the city," found herself today all tangled up with a nationally-hunted forger, according to word received in Newburyport.

She is Miss Sally Gardomski, 18, of 25 Smith ct., and, according to the dispatches, she was questioned today by New York police, under the name "Sally Gordon," in hope that they might learn something about W. H. Hawkins, former U. S. army aviator, alleged to be a notorious forger.

Detective McCarthy of the New York police said there is no charge against Miss Gardomski, but that he hoped to learn the whereabouts of Hawkins, whose forgeries the detective declared, are "masterpieces."

At the Gardomski home today Mrs. Mother, Mrs. Stanley Gardomski said her two daughters, Sally and Ruby, 17, left for New York about 10 days ago to look for work.

Early this week the mother received a letter from Sally telling of her changed name and stating that she had separated from Ruby.

ONE HELD FOR SHOWER DEATH

Augusta, Me., May 22—The death of an insane patient at State Hospital under an icy shower bath was revealed today with the arrest of Frances Houston, a former attendant on a charge of manslaughter.

Houston a resident of Mills was treated at Pittsfield by Joseph H Young, Jr, deputy chief of the highway police.

The warrant charged Houston with the death of Alfred Hoxsie 45, of Sanford, Me last April, following the shower bath alleged to have been administered by Houston.

Houston was discharged as an attendant four days after the death.

Dr. George Burnham Mannett, Boston pathologist, and Roland L. Mehan, county medical examiner, were called into the case by County Attorney Harry C. Stone and an autopsy was performed yesterday.

The findings were reported to Judge Arthur E. Thomas of the court and the warrant followed.

C. C. Elwell Dead

New Haven, May 22—Charles Clement Elwell, civil engineer in governmental and railroad projects and public utilities commissioner of this state for several years, died here last night at 74.

FEAR GAMES MAY BEAT SALOONS

Nuevo Laredo, Mex., May 22 (AP)—The State of Tamaulipas has decided to allow gambling and casinos have been leased, but imported paraphernalia is idle because cabaret and saloon owners refuse to lease space for a competing attraction.

Frank Williamson, saloon proprietor, voicing the views of his associates, said he feared American tourists might end profitable operation of saloons and restaurants by their interest in gambling. More than 100 saloons are in operation here, largely supported by American visitors.

UTILITY BOARD DEFENDS NEW HAVEN ROAD

Hartford, May 22 (INS)—At no time since the New Haven road resumed operations of its lines after the war board had relinquished control in 1920 have the road's finances warranted meeting all demands for improvements and alterations.

Such is the reply made by counsel for the Public Utilities Commission to the state's demand for removal of the commission for neglect of duty in failing to order the railroad to remove one grade crossing a year for each 50 miles of track operated.

The petition for removal of the commission was filed two years ago by Albert Levitt of Reading, and has passed through the Superior and Supreme Courts for decisions on various phases.

Battle Cruiser for France Is Proposed

Paris, May 22 (AP)—France's reply to the recent launching by Germany of its new cruiser Deutschland came today with a recommendation to the Chamber of Deputies for a new battle cruiser of 23,200 tons to be laid down forthwith.

Deputy Charles Dantelou, chairman of the naval affairs committee and one of the negotiators of the London treaty of 1930, made the proposal, which will add nothing new to the building program already projected.

REMEMBERING

Farewells are over! Now there will be peace.
Such peace as comes in wakeful hours of night
As golden as the tales of ancient Greece;
Peace carved in marble, white as angels white
But in these shining hours of quietude
The nagging thought of kisses will recur
And beauty will be only a dull blur,
And thoughts of other girls will be but rude
And profane thoughts unworthy of our minds.
For love we had was free and keen as winds
You should remember all the gleaming hours
You should but then I know you never will
But I still hold the reminiscent scent of flowers
That grew like tapestry upon a hill.
But you'll remember only for a day

Beacon Hill

—by—

Betty Arden

IT WAS A WARM, SUNNY DAY. AFTER MANY DELAYS and many spring showers, summer at last came to Boston. The question was, "Where is a cool place to eat?" So we dropped in at the Ritz. There is a charm about that blue and silver room.

* * *

CHARLOTTE LYMAN

* * *

This sextette came out this season and are among the peppiest, prettiest and most popular. (Some girls have luck! Charlotte was in an automobile accident last fall and now she has a naughty little dimple in her damask cheek where a scar ought to be. She is the adorable daughter of a charming mother, Mrs. Ronald T., fascinating friendly and facetious, a devastating combination.)

* * *

Anne is Mrs. Evans Dick's daughter and like mother like daughter, we like the way they walk up Beacon St. with their chins in the air, giving the effect of "we belong," and they do.

* * *

The girls were all dining hatless. It was hot in spite of the ice tinkling in the glasses, and their damp curls clung to their snowy brows.

* * *

Harvard Freshman Jubilee

THEY WERE, NO DOUBT, COMPARING NOTES ON the next exciting event of the debutante world, which is the Harvard Freshman Jubilee. Young Beale, son of the Arthur Beales, is giving a dinner—the girls thought it was at the Ritz—and Anne Dick, Barbara Bremer, Charlotte Lyman, Dorothy Forbes, a sub-deb, and a group of others have been invited. They were worrying because on the same evening Fred L. W. Richardson, Jr., of Laneside Farm, Charles River, is giving a black and white ball. This will call for a lot of planning. The young Richardsons are awfully popular and interesting and have a flair for doing things "different."

* * *

AS WE WERE STROLLING out, quite cooled off by the iced tea, we saw Eloise Weld with a friend in the lounge. Miss Weld's engagement has recently been announced and we hear she is to be married in the fall. She is a truly beautiful brunette, large dark eyes, high cheek bones and the freshness of a gardenia.

Eloise Weld

* * *

MISS HELEN CURTIS, on the job of a season past, of the kind type with an aim and seem to spend the summer in Europe, is reported to be "choosy" when it comes to picking a husband.

Invitations have been received to the wedding of Miss Mary Raymond of Crescent Hall to William Davis Sayre of Pequit Chase, New London, Ct., and a private car will be awaiting the guests at the South Station to conduct them to and from. It is not seldom one hears of a private car these days. It is worthy of mention. Wallace and Mary are going to make a handsome couple.

* * *

Ushers Selected

A GROUP OF JUNIOR LEAGUERS, headed by Anna H. Dennen, Mary Cowles, Madelaine Jonckheere and Betty Dennen, will sell flowers, under the direction of Miss Mary Winthrop Bargent, at the performance of "Rango," at the Exeter Street Theater tomorrow morning. Now if we might make the suggestion after having bought flowers, candy and programs from Junior League workers all winter, a little course in salesmanship — say from Fealtes Lillie or Frances Williams might help the receipts and provide a real entertainment. After all this publicity, we feel they should really put on an act and not depend so much on that band of ribbon to designate they are part of the show.

MRS. WALTER E. EDGE'S FROCKS WIN HER FAME AT PARIS SOCIALS

U. S. Envoy's Wife Popular Hostess

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Paris May 22 The rains of spring have washed clean the Foux de Dampee and the bearded enclosure at Longchamps, and now that sunshine has become a daily delight the races meetings on the bank of the Seine draw all the fashionables on Sundays and Thursdays.

Among the regulars for the big event on Sunday have been Ambassador Walter E. Edge and his charming wife who was at her loveliest recently in a blue and white ensemble with a hat to match.

This seems just the place to remark on what a success Mrs. Edge has made of her part in her husband's mission. Popular with all classes of Americans, she has captivated the French as well and her flare for picking just the right frocks has won her enviable attention.

Mrs. Edge's Guests

Among those with Mrs. Edge at the race track the other afternoon were Mrs. A. Kingsley Macomber, in a blue dotted popeline with a new flying marine blue hat bright with a diamond pin, the whole set off by a gorgeous white fox; the American-born Princess De Faucigny-Lucinge, in a blue and black satin crepe with a marine blue hat and a silver fox; and Mrs. John A. Logan in a beige tweed topped by a tawny fur, her hat being one of the new fricottes in pale straw.

Now that the spring has really come, people at the Ritz are lunching out of doors on the terrace. Over the week-ends those who are not race f ng head for the country. Ermenonville is particularly popular. There the Count Armand De La Rochefoucauld has a restaurant where he receives guests in person.

Mrs. Crosby Hostess

There Mrs. Harry Crosby has a country home where she has gathered about her one of the principal salons of after-war France. Among her guests is the beautiful Madame Boyriven, who was seen last Sunday wearing a brown and beige crepe-de-chine frock under a full-length brown coat and a small matching hat.

At another table at Rochefaucauld's Hostellerie Jean Jacques were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin H. Hutton and their daughter, Barbara. Mrs. Hutton was in pale green chiffon and her daughter in pale grey printed with flowers. Mrs. Rene Fyotz, formerly Esther Morris was also there, wearing a full-length bright blue coat and a matching hat.

Blouses Are in Full Force

By ANN ARDEN

IF EVER women were tempted to overstock their wardrobes they are so this summer with the blouse craze going full force.

* * *

JUST ONE more blouse and then just another and pretty soon the blouse closet is full to overflowing with not enough occasions in a socially full summer to let them appear as often as they should.

* * *

LINGERIE blouses with silk suits are fascinating things. The freshness of the thin cotton materials make them interesting and the contrast with the silks gives a certain design to the costume as a whole.

* * *

ORGANDIE batiste, handkerchief linen, dotted swiss, eyelet embroidery—all of these and many more materials are being used for the little blouses of lingerie made with or without sleeves and meant to be worn with any sort of suit, more particularly the silk ones when summer is here.

* * *

THE BLOUSE pictured is fashioned of white linen, eyelet embroidered, its turn-over collar cutaway fronts, and short sleeves finished in finely pleated plain white linen, as are the small buttons center front, and the narrow tie belt. The sailor hat of rough white straw has round crown, becoming cloche brim, and is banded in brown and white ribbon. The necklace of graduated white beads adds a further note of cool freshness.

* * *

WHEN ALL is said and done it is the softness and fraiiness of the effect as a whole that carries the day and there are many ways of achieving this end.

BOOK PRIZES
WHAT BECOMES OF THE WINNERS?

By Charles Hanson Towne

THE recent Pulitzer awards raised the storm that inevitably follows the giving of any prize. The general public is always dissatisfied. Heaven help any jury, sitting on so thankless a board of judges.

We can all remember how indignant we were when, a few years ago, the award did not go to "The Show Off," George Kelly's remarkable play, but to some other of far less obvious merit. Then as if to atone for its error, the Pulitzer committee the next year set the seal of its approval upon another play of Mr. Kelly's, "Craig's Wife," which had not half the merit of its predecessor. They seemed to fear public antagonism; but they only created another kind of antagonism, and made themselves something of a laughing stock

Personally, we were delighted with this year's winner in the realm of the theater; for when we first saw "Alison's House" we were deeply moved, and even wrote enthusiastically to Miss Glaspel and Miss Lo Gallienne about it; and we are not given to such letter writing, as a rule. (Which, by the way, is not a confession to be proud of.)

* * *

SPEAKING of prizes for literature reminds us that the other day we happened to be lunching at the Coffee House with John Held, Jr., and his guest, John Clapp, of the publishing firm of Ives Washburn. The subject was thrown like a small verbal bombshell into the center of the table that scarcely ever did anything of value come out of a prize contest.

This was Mr. Held's point; but Mr. Clapp claimed otherwise; and he cited the fact that both Martha Ostenso and Mazo de la Roche burst upon an astonished world after their names had been announced as the winners in two widely advertised competitions; the first through Dodd, Mead & Co., the second through Houghton, Mifflin of Boston. And each was hitherto utterly unknown

Then we recalled that when we were literary editor of the Delineator many years ago under Theodore Dreiser, we had charge of a short story contest which brought forth Zona Gale. True, Miss Gale had published a great many short stories previous to that time; but she had not published anything of the significance of her later success, "Miss Lulu Bett." Only her Felleas and Fitzere, and a few of her Friendship Village stories had appeared in various magazines. And we remembered, too, that in this particular anonymous contest, every writer was permitted to offer three manuscripts.

Miss Gale not only won the first prize of $2000, but the other two tales which she had entered were accepted and paid for at the then exhibitant rate of five cents a word. And we ourselves had the great pleasure of notifying her of her success; and we remember, as though it were yesterday, that when we took her the large checks, and said that now of course she would probably take a vacation and go abroad, she calmly and quietly said: "Oh, no; I shall go back to Portage, Wisconsin, and try to write some better stories."

Miss Gale has gone far since that sadly distant day; and she deserves the fame which has come to her. There are not many more dearly loved authors in the United States.

* * *

IN the Collier's Weekly contest, long before that of the Delineator, the first prize of $5000 went to a totally unknown author; and though he wrote many stories thereafter, and published them, he did not emerge as Miss Ostenso, Miss de la Roche and Miss Gale emerged. His name was Rowland Thomas, and he is a man of great talent. He will probably do a fine novel one of these days. If our memory does not betray us, the second prize went to so famous a writer as Margaret Deland, with a tale of great power called "Dingy Waters."

* * *

JOHN PEALE BISHOP has just been awarded the $5000 offered by Scribner's for the best novelette entered in their recent contest. Many of us will watch with interest what he may do hereafter.

It is sometimes a handicap to be so fortunate. It is like the handicap of being born with money. Yet rich men's sons frequently deserve more credit than poor boys; for it would be no easy for them to slump and slide backward, instead of pressing forward.

It's Grand to Be Busy in Paris!

By Bruno Lessing

PARIS—I wonder if anybody is trying to kid President Hoover. Here is the schedule of what is called "one of his busiest days since he entered the White House":

6:00 A. M.—Rises.
6:30 A. M.—Medicine ball.
8:00 A. M.—Breakfast.
9:30-10:15 A. M.—Brief conference with callers.
10:30 A. M.—Cabinet meeting.
12:00 Noon—Receives delegation of tourists.
12:30 P. M.—Speech at Pan-American Day celebration
1:00 P. M.—Luncheon.
2:30 P. M.—Attends opening baseball game.
5:30 P. M.—Speaks by radio from White House.
8:00 P. M.—Dines with Secretary of the Navy.
11:00 P. M.—Retires.

It's a shame to make the President get up at 6 a. m. and not give him any breakfast until 8. Dining with the Secretary of the Navy is, of course, his own fault; he appointed him. But making the President spend three hours at a game is downright cruelty.

* * *

On that same day, however, I was much busier than the President. And I'm willing to match my schedule against his 10:00 A. M.—Rose, shaved and bathed.

10:20 A. M.—Breakfast.
10:30 A. M.—Smoked a couple of cigarettes.
11:00 A. M.—Brief conference with callers, tailors, collectors.
11:30 A.M.—Addressed a meeting of the wife and the servant on the subjects of keeping buttons on my shirts, keeping tabs on the number of my handkerchiefs and seeing that I got my own collars back from the laundry.
12:00 Noon—Spent half an hour going over all my check stubs trying to figure out that overdrawn business
12:30 P. M.—Rested
1:00 P. M.—Luncheon.
2:00 P. M.—Attended the races at Longchamps, lost $10.
5:30 P. M.—Added a group at the Ritz bar on the folly of gambling.
7:00 P. M.—Conference at Luigi's bar.
8:30 P. M.—Dined with the wife
9:00 P. M.—Heated debate as to whether we go to Germany or the South of France. I'm for Germany, but afraid will have to compromise on South of France.
9:30 P. M.—Played Russian bank and afterward casino. Won 12 cents
11:00 P. M.—Began reading a detective story
3:00 A. M.—Retired

Only, instead of getting a pat on the back, all I heard from the wife was: "Don't you ever get tired of loafing?"

Oh, please, please, Huntley! I'm only human!

BELASCO
THE LAST OF OUR STAGE PIONEERS

By Deems Taylor

WITH the death of David Belasco a dynasty becomes extinct. He was the last of the line of producers who were in at the creation of the modern American theater. There were not many of them. There was Augustin Daly; then there was Charles Frohman; and there was Belasco. Winthrop Ames is—or was—of their line, but he has retired. The Theater Guild, a corporation, is the nearest equivalent of them that we have now.

Those producers all had two characteristics in common. First, they used their own money. This fact is not particularly important, except as it is indicative of their attitude toward the theater. They were not business men in the sense that the contemporary producer is one; they did not sell their services to a syndicate of backers, at an agreed percentage of the profits, if any. They were gamblers. They picked plays, and backed their judgment with their own capital.

* * *

THEIR other characteristic was the fact that the plays they produced bore their trade mark. Nowadays, so-and-so is identified by the fact that he is the producer of this or that success, or string of successes. Not so with them. The words, "A Charles Frohman Production" meant something to theatergoers of the 19 hundreds. They meant that he could count upon seeing a particular kind—or at least, grade—of play, produced in a certain manner, with a certain guaranteed minimum level of acting.

What they got, in the best days of Belasco, was romantic melodrama—glamorous people moving through exciting events. Some of these plays he wrote; some he found; some he rewrote. They were not great plays; they were not always very good plays, except as regards the extraordinary technical skill with which they were constructed. Of the slightest trace of any subtlety they were almost innocent. Good was good, and bad was bad, in most of them; and if virtue suffered, it was no laughing matter. In them, people frequently behaved, not so much in accordance with their inner promptings as in accordance with the exigencies of the third act.

But, what grand theater they were, and what entertainment! Look at the list: Du Barry; The Heart of Maryland; The Music Master ("If you don't vant her, I vant her!"); The Rose of the Rancho (with the U. S. cavalry conning satisfactorily to the rescue); The Girl of the Golden West (remember the card game, and Frank Keenan as Jack Rance?); The Darling of the Gods (remember George Arliss and Blanche Bates in the torture scene?); The Return of Peter Grimm; The Son-Daughter; and Madame Butterfly.

* * *

IN those days, his one venture in realism was Eugene Walter's The Easiest Way. I saw it when it was first produced, and in the revival. It did not stand the years well. We had gone far—and grown older—during the years between, and it creaked a bit, the second time, and did not seem so significant—or so shocking—as it had been

The older generation were horrified by it, and the younger one thrilled; and its tag line—"I'm going to Rector and raise hell!"—became the classic example of the utmost limits to which the stage might dare venture, but also ruined Rector's

It was not only the carpentry of these plays that made them glamorous; it was the manner in which they were produced.

When a Belasco door opened, the adjoining walls did not ripple like a wind-swept meadow, a Belasco court costume was a court costume, not a cotton sham. Above all, he showed us what could be done with lights

* * *

HIS realism went to extremes, of course. He could mount a play to death, as he did The Merchant of Venice. At times he strongly suggested Mr. Vincent Crummles, with his practical pump and his search for a play in which to use it. But he did get us, almost single-handed out of the "center door fancy" period of stage production.

He will be remembered for those lights—and for actors. Think of Belasco and you think of Blanche Bates, Frances Starr, Lenore Ulric, Frank Keenan, Leslie Carter, George Arliss and David Warfield. They all owe him at least something, I imagine

He must have been lonely, these last years. The theater had wrung him dry 10 years ago or more. It had taken what he had to contribute and passed on long ago. He still produced, and may have made money; but he was out of it.

THE REAL CLARA BOW

By Louella Parsons

Clara Bow was now in demand. You see her at the left in one of her early pictures called "Grit," made by the Film Guild, in 1923. The "It" girl, who got her first big chance in a New Bedford whaling film, was now becoming a real actress of the reel. During her early days in Hollywood, Clara did a number of comedy bits with Chester Conklin. You see her below in a roller skating stunt with Conklin. It was the famed Mary Carr, of mother roles, who taught Clara to make up, according to story told Louella Parsons by "Papa" Bow.

(In previous installments, Louella O. Parsons, who probably knows Clara Bow better than any other person in the world, told of the early days in the life of the flaming "It" girl. Tragedy after tragedy in efforts to start a film career, coupled with affairs of the heart, followed the future star.

Then came the first bright spot in her life when she won a film contest. Even this was trailed by misfortune when, in the cutting of the film, every scene in which Clara appeared was removed. Then came the first step on the road to stardom at New Bedford in the filming of 'Down to the Sea in Ships' by Elmer Clifton. New York critics acclaimed Clara as a future star.)

CHAPTER 6

The girls with the indifference of youth laughed. So that was what happened to the girl who won a contest and whose picture had been in all the newspapers.

"I've had some terrible days since," said Clara. "I've been the victim of blackmailers. I have been robbed. I have found that friends I trusted were unworthy, but never have I had such a horrible feeling as that day when I found that all of my scenes had been cut out of my first picture. I was sick to my stomach. I was dizzy. I walked home, hating to meet my father, who, alone, believed in me.

"He comforted me and said: 'Don't worry—maybe all the rest of them are jealous of you.'

"I knew they weren't jealous. I knew I was bad. Something was wrong.

Then followed days and days of doubt and worry. I couldn't get a job. I walked [illegible] to studio, begging for a chance.

"I won a contest," I told them. They only laughed.

Clara Gets New Chance

"I thought," Clara told me, "my one was a permanent one—that all my life I would have to live in one room, eat miserable food, wear awful clothes and be denied the things in life any girl enjoys. If it had not been for my father's encouragement, I think I would have died.

"My mother was gradually growing worse, and finally we had to put her in a sanitarium. It took every cent my father had, but we did so because we wanted her to live, we loved her so.

"Just when things were the blackest, I was asked to meet Elmer Clifton and his assistant director. My father went with me. They both took one look at me and said: 'I'm afraid you're too old.'

"I had worn a waist of my mother's and a long skirt of hers because I wanted to overcome my youthful appearance. At every studio they told me I was too much of a kid, or too fat, or too something.

"Can't I go home and get my own clothes?' I pleaded with Elmer Clifton. 'Honest, I'm not old.'

Elmer Clifton gave her permission to go home. He met her and Robert Bow the next day at the Algonquin Hotel.

"We're going to New Bedford," he said. "I'll take you with me. I can't say whether or not you'll fit the part."

Clara, delighted at this change of atmosphere, packed her few belongings and departed with the company which included Raymond McKee and Marguerite Cortot, who later became his wife.

Robert Bow in telling me about the episode, said:

Life of Contrasts
Clara's Name In Lights

"I hated to see her go alone, but one look at Elmer Clifton's face convinced me I could trust my little girl with him. 'Will you write to me?' I begged Clara. But I didn't hear much from her for two weeks. Then came a telegram saying, 'Please, Daddy, I'm so lonesome—can't you come to New Bedford?'

"I took the first train," Mr. Bow said, "and as I walked up the steps to the hotel where the company was stopping, I met a beautiful young woman. To my surprise, she threw her arms around my neck.

"'Daddy! Daddy!' she cried, 'don't you know me?'

It was Clara. I didn't know her. She had makeup on—she wore better clothes—and, in fact, looked like a different girl.

"I shall always be grateful to dear Mary Carr who taught her how to use makeup and who helped her buy the new dress. Neither Clara, nor I have ever forgotten Mrs. Carr's kindness. If it had not been for her help, Clara might never have made the success she did in 'Down to the Sea in Ships.'"

Life for Clara Bow has always been a matter of contrasts. After great happiness has always come tragedy and unhappiness. The little red-haired girl whose story has so touched the hearts of those who know it has always feared to be too happy, for once she felt that she was sitting on top of the world there was sure to come the awful tomorrow and the abyss into which she has fought so hard not to sink.

The showing of "Down to the Sea in Ships" was a triumph for our little heroine. New York critics, generally considered the most difficult in the world, the most blase and the hardest to please, discovered her.

Clara was not a headliner—mercy no! She just played the part of a little stowaway. The headliners were Raymond McKee and Marguerite Cortot. Up in glamorous electric lights went the names of these two favorites. Clara's name was only among those who are usually called the supporting cast. But the keen New York critics saw the vivid little face, the bright eyes and the radiant personality that was hers.

'It' Girl Parties
Willie Steps Into Life

They wrote in adjectives that almost any actress would give a month's pay to have written about her. They wrote so constantly of the unknown girl who played the stowaway that one day the theater owner went outside and had her name put in electric lights. The name Clara Bow shone on the busy Broadway street, Clara walked past the theater time and time again just to see her name.

"I can never tell you," she told me, "what happiness I felt when I saw that name. Life had been so terribly hard and it seemed to me now that all my troubles were to be in the past."

Fate, however, that cruel thing that's haunted and dogged the footsteps of this little girl, was not to allow her complete happiness.

After her success in "Down to the Sea In Ships," Clara started to go out with other young people. She was invited to parties, she was making a little money and she was able to buy a few simple little frocks. She had so little gayety in her life that this seemed to her to be the greatest thing in the world.

It was Willie—and Clara has asked me not to tell his last name for he is now a prosperous business man of Brooklyn with a family for fear the mention of his name in connection with her might displease. Willie's memories of Clara are no doubt very pleasant for he was strongly attracted to the little red-haired girl.

He wasn't the only one, however, who saw in her the realization of their dreams. She was very lovely, she was very young, she was very innocent—this little Clara Bow.

I know, because I saw her about this time and I thought I had never seen such a sweet child in all my life.

She couldn't understand why men looked at her with longing in their eyes. She didn't know what it meant to have a man want her. She was innocent. Later, she was to learn that men are not always kind in their dealings with women. Often this admiration meant something sinister that the wide-eyed child couldn't understand.

Doukhobors Want to Get Out of Russia

The proposed removal, which has not yet been approved by Russian authorities, would be to Mexico, leaders said.

Briand Completes Work With Council

Geneva, May 22 (AP)—Aristide Briand, foreign minister of France, went back to Paris today, having wound up his work with the League of Nations Council and the Pan-European Commission.

There is the keenest interest here in his political future, for his resignation as foreign minister is in the hands of Premier Laval and there is a possibility he may not return for other sessions at Geneva.

DAILY TRUE STORY

FINER CLAY

PETER WAS SEATED IN FRONT OF A LARGE CANVAS

WHEN THE clock in the pretty apartment she shared with her chum, Janet, struck eight, Lorna decided that it was time for her to reach a decision with Peter.

Once more he had forgotten an engagement with her. Thirty minutes later a taxi dropped her at the door of an ancient Greenwich Village building and Lorna climbed the rickety stairs.

As she entered the big bare room, Peter, seated meditatively in front of an immense canvas, came out of his dream and rose to meet Lorna. His face lighted with gladness, but as he was about to make excuses Lorna stopped him

Wasted Two Years
Since Promised Marriage

"Peter," she began, "this can't go on any longer. Do you realize that we've wasted two whole years since I promised to marry you?"

"Wasted?" said Peter with a look of surprise as he glanced at the several canvases about the room. "Why, Lorna, I've got to make a success—for you. And it takes work."

"But can't you see, Peter, that we'll never marry if you keep on this way? I sympathize with your great ambition, but if you'll only listen to me—if you'd do those fine paintings that Arnold wants—and some other things in between, you could work on your masterpiece just the same."

Peter raised a protesting hand. "I won't commercialize my art," he retorted almost angrily. "Some of us are of the finer clay, we refuse to put ourselves on the bargain counter." He strode back and forth as he talked, repeatedly passing his hands across his eyes. "I tell you, Lorna, that just because you are selling your talents, the best that's in you, to trade, is no reason—"

In White Anger
Laura Accuses Peter

"I beg your pardon, it was," he said contritely. . But Lorna had reached a stage of white anger. "You must admit," she exploded, "that you're earning nothing, that the little fortune your father left is about gone, that you're sacrificing yourself, body and soul, to an ideal that may after all prove to be just an empty dream."

"I shall have tried," said Peter gently. "And I think I shall win—in the end." He sat down on the stool close to the canvas and dropped his head in his hands, pressing his eyes with his fingers.

"I'm tired," he said, "and the light here seems to be getting bad."

"Oh, Peter!" exclaimed Lorna, "do try to see things my way, dear."

"Oh, Peter!" exclaimed Lorna, Peter shook his head as he smiled wanly. "Art is an exacting mistress," he said. With no other word, Lorna drew the ring from her finger and laid it on the shelf of his easel. "Goodbye, Peter," she said chokingly

He watched her in a dazed way as she walked out. "Lorna!" he cried as the door shut. But she did not come back

Janet found Lorna in tears when she came from downtown that night

Lorna Tired Out
Decides on Vacation

"What's the matter, honey?" asked her sympathetic friend. "Nothing," said Lorna. "Tired out, I fancy. Been working a bit too hard. I've made up my mind to take a holiday, Janet. All my life I've wanted to get on a liner, go aboard, see things in the old world. I've saved a thousand dollars now—and I'm going."

"Good for you," said Janet, "but that isn't anything to cry about, is it?"

"It's every woman's right to cry over nothing," returned Lorna with a tearful smile.

Three weeks passed. Lorna was very busy with arrangements for her great adventure. But Janet noticed that she was far from happy. Then she came home one Thursday evening, feeling a little hurt because Lorna had not been seen fit to confide in her. Janet was dynamic and rather brusque

"Why didn't you tell me about Peter?" she demanded accusingly. "You've never hidden anything from me before."

"Peter?" said Lorna lamely.

QUINCY MAYOR MAKES BID FOR DORCHESTER

While Councillor Israel Ruby of Dorchester was planning to marshal his forces and fight any move that might be made to have Dorchester seceds from Boston, Mayor Thomas J. McGrath of Quincy announced today that he was planning to extend an invitation to the district to become a part of Quincy.

Mayor McGrath said that he planned to write a letter to Patrick J. Connelly, president of the Dorchester Board of Trade, and make arrangements for the possible annexation of Dorchester to Quincy.

The secession threat was made last night by Connelly at the annual meeting of the board.

Connelly threatened that Dorchester, with one-sixth of the city's population, will secede from Boston and set up an independent municipality. Neither the Legislature nor the City Council, Connelly declared, has given Dorchester the consideration to which it is entitled.

Councillor Ruby pointed to the numerous improvements made in his district. He said that Connelly or the Dorchester Trade Board had "no kick coming" as far as his district was concerned.

This secession threat was uttered in the presence of nearly 100 members of the board, and was received with general approval. Connelly declared that 130,000 persons reside in Dorchester and for that reason the district should be treated with more consideration.

The following officers were all re-elected: Patrick J. Connelly, president; William T. Doyle, Frank W. Merrick, Joseph Polisk, vice-presidents; Alfred J. L. Ford, secretary; John J. Dailey, assistant secretary; John H. Dorsey, treasurer.

A WISH FOR THE DAY

That I Had More Than One Pair of Hands

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

"Good morning, Georgie!"
"Good morning, Glorietta!"
"A lovely day after all the rain!"
"Yes MAM. I saw a mocking bird this morning!"
"Was he saying 'Georgie-Georgie-Georgie' as they do in California?"
"No—if he was I didn't know it. It couldn't have sounded nicer, however, to hear a mocking bird's voice saying it than it does to hear YOUR honey voice."
Silence while Glorietta blushes and poses.
"What," says Georgie, "is your wish for the day—besides the one to stay as young and beautiful for ever and ever amen as you are this Wednesday?"
"To have," vows Glorietta, "MORE THAN ONE PAIR OF HANDS! There are more things in this world to do with the pair I have than I will ever do. If I had a half dozen—with one I could be making new curtains for the sun parlor. With another I could be digging, DIGGING in my garden. With another pair I could be painting my lamp shade that I decorated with a lino cut. With another I could be cooking—I CAN cook. With another pair I could be playing my piano and indulging in all too few music magiced dreams. And with another I could be washing the luncheon dishes! There And I could still use a few more pair than that."
"Life," says Georgie, "is like that! Too few hands, too few years to see and do all the things we know are in the world to see and do. Think of the books that I will never see and read that are sitting silently beautiful, waiting for me! Think of the pink tinted snowy tops of the world that I will never stand upon because I will die too soon! Think of the pictures I will never see—or paint. The letters I will never write. The words I will never say, no matter how fast I talk—the kind ones, I mean. Think of the WORK in my head—already done in fancy—that my hands can't be quick enough to do. Life's like that, Glorietta. But—it's walk a little way in the early morning world—and do you think you could manage to let me hold for a little while ONE of those pairs of hands you wish for?" —NELL BRINKLEY.

THREE WEEKS later, the Fennys made the trip down from upper Quebec by motor, a second car containing two personal maids and the lighter luggage, following.

A premature burst of Spring was already on the necks of a languid Winter, so that much of the trip was taken on dry roads and to the first freckling of foliage.

Jenny, whose effort all the way down from Cañada had been not to seem too constantly excited was grateful, too, for the loveliness. It helped to account for the exultant something that kept rising and overflowing in her Ramon was along

A Welcome Guest

He had spent two of the three weeks with them in camp. Jennifer had been glad for her mother's sake. Her incredible mother, who could while away time, for want of something better, with this boy, pleasant enough timber for an evening's flirtation, provided there was plenty of low windings of tango music to sustain illusion, but who had actually sufficed to keep her mother amused during all of what might have been the interminable stretches of their stay at camp

Could it be that he was smitten with her mother? The slim thought trailed through her tired mind and petered out as she sat looking out at the flashing of Spring . . .

How good her mother had been! How heavenly good! From that strange and terrifying moment when her father had sat looking at her as if his eyes were conflagrations that would leap out in flame over her body, the dearness of Jenny had poured like sweet oil over the terrible burning from those eyes.

"Mother, please, please, don't keep on talking. You've said that over and over again. I know you think there are no good fish in the sea as ever came out of it. You've told me. What good does that do me if I don't care what

WOODEN SCHOOL IN DORCHESTER IS VIEWED AS 'FIRE TRAP'

SWAN SCHOOL 'TINDER BOX,' SAY PARENTS

Parents of pupils attending the Robert Swan School, Thetford ave. and Evans st., Dorchester, call the school a "tinder box." Despite the fact that the school is equipped with fire escapes, they claim that the building is a fire trap that should be abolished. In the photo the fire escapes are shown. Note the portable school in the foreground. (Staff photo.)

PARENTS FEAR FOR CHILDREN GOING THERE

New Building Is Urged to Replace the "Tinder Box" Standing 56 Years

(This is the eighth of a series of articles on Boston schools, what they have and what they lack and the need for more and more modern schools.)

When a fire department captain trembles as the tapper in a fire station announces a particular box alarm, fearing that a certain school is afire, then conditions are certainly grave.

This situation exists in Dorchester with respect to a captain and the Robert Swan primary school at the junction of Thetford ave and Evans st.

In his survey of the Dorchester district in connection with its campaign for more and better schools the Boston Evening American learned that the Robert Swan school, despite the fact that it is equipped with a fire escape, is regarded by public officials and parents as a "tinder-box" and a fire-trap.

ENTIRELY OF WOOD

The Thetford ave. school is entirely of wood. It is two stories high and houses more than 300 young children. They range from the kindergarten to the fourth grade. The building is one of the most antiquated in the city, having been constructed 56 years ago, and according to the parents of the children taught there, should be abolished at once.

During a legislative hearing yesterday Rep. Frank J. McFarland of Dorchester said to the joint legislative committee on mercantile affairs:

"A fire captain in Dorchester told me that he trembles every time the tapper sounds an alarm in the engine house from the box in the location where the Robert Swan school is situated."

Later, in explaining his remark to a Boston Evening American reporter, Rep. McFarland said:

"The fire company of which my friend is captain responded on two occasions for fires in the Robert Swan school. He said he trembles every time the box is sounded as he regards the school as a tinder box and fears children may some day be trapped in a fire there.

NEW SCHOOL NEEDED

"The school is box-like affair and would be quickly consumed if fire got a start. The fire escapes on the building do not eliminate the fire hazard. They would be no good if the children could not get to them. Fire drills could be of little use if escape was cut off.

"In my opinion this school should be replaced by a new and much larger school of fireproof construction. In addition to being a firetrap, this school is far too small for the needs of the district. In the school yard are two portables, buildings which are a health menace to the little ones who are taught there. During the past winter both children and teachers have been forced to wear rubbers, overshoes and extra stockings to keep their feet warm and dry while attending classes.

PRAISES BOSTON AMERICAN

"I believe the Boston American deserves the commendation of all the citizens of the city for the humane campaign it is conducting in behalf of the children in endeavoring to remedy existing conditions.

"I believe that the machinery which is now located in the main buildings of several schools should be transferred to the portables and the children, who are studying in the portables, removed to the main buildings.

"I believe the space in the main buildings should be devoted entirely to the teaching of the three R's.

"This situation exists in the Henry L. Pierce school in Washington st. at Welles ave., Dorchester, in Mary Hemenway school, at Adams and King sts., Dorchester, and I am informed they also exist in other schools. Move out the work benches; move in the children."

TAGGED 5 TIMES NO ACTION

A fifth parking complaint against Julian D. Rainey of the city law department was not pressed today by Corp. Counsel Samuel Silverman.

At the same time Silverman also not pressed a third parking complaint against Joseph Sucilla a so a member of his department.

Suspension of driving license customarily follows a fourth tag and the police have notified Registrar George A. Parker that Rainey is a fifth offender.

STATE TROOPERS TRAP TWO SUSPECTS IN BIG 'ARSON RING'

SEIZURE MADE DURING PLOT TO FIRE INN

Officers Watch Men Soaking Place in Oil, Then Take Them Into Toils

State fire inspectors and state troopers watched elaborate preparations to burn Broad Acres Inn at Lake Nippenicket, Bridgewater, early today—then stepped in and arrested two men.

With the arrests, police believe they have blocked operations of an arson ring responsible for 12 recent fires in Massachusetts and Rhode Island—set with intent to defraud insurance companies.

The men arrested—Andrea Gaglioni, 42, of Ralph st., and James J. Rush, 36, of Sutton st., both in Providence—were arraigned today in district court, charged with arson with intent to defraud, and were held in $10,000 each for a hearing June 8.

"TIP" LEADS TO ARRESTS.

Immediately after the arraignment three fire inspectors and five State troopers went to Providence to join with Rhode Island officials in apprehending other alleged members of the ring.

The arrests were made as the result of a "tip" in State police that Providence incendiaries were to burn a building for insurance late last night, "somewhere in Massachusetts."

All roads from Rhode Island into Massachusetts were watched for a car bearing a designated number plate, and when the car was picked up it was trailed to the inn at Bridgewater.

Hidden around the building, Fire Inspectors Edward H. Murtagh, George O. Mansfield and John N. Sullivan, and troopers from the barracks at Wrentham and Rehoboth, watched two men sprinkle 30 gallons of kerosene and gasoline through all 36 rooms of the inn, break holes in the walls and stuff in oil-soaked newspapers and lay fuses to boxes of matches on oil-soaked papers.

TROOPERS NAB MEN

As the two men are alleged to have been preparing to light the fuses, timed for about 30 minutes, the inspectors and troopers closed in and made them captives.

The inn, once the property of a New York millionaire, is now owned by Mary Marianna of Providence, according to police.

RUM WAR PROBE UP TO FEDERAL GRAND JURY

The federal grand jury entered the rum war today.

Details of the smuggling conspiracy and its attendant violence were laid before the federal indicting unit, even as "The Masked Reporter" continued his exposures in the Boston Evening American.

Asst U. S. Atty. Hubert C. Thompson, in charge of the racket probe, appeared before the grand jury with several coast guard men. He had conferred previously with Deputy Customs Collector Thomas J. Finnegan.

Meanwhile three more truckloads of liquor, valued at $9,000, were in the hands of the Federal authorities as a direct result of the conflict between "Big John Magnus, favored Boston smuggler, and the powerful outside combination engaged in "muscling in" on the racket in New England.

The liquor was seized at Waltham and five men allegedly engaged in its transportation from Providence were arrested as the direct result of a tip to federal authorities from the outside interests.

Each was held in $2500 for hearing on June 3.

Before arraignment, four of the five admitted giving false identities to the federal agents who pounced down on their contraband. They were arraigned as Guido Carbone, 34, of Beacon st., Brookline; Willard J. Gauthier, 32, of the same street; Thomas E. Marcello, 24, of Douglas ave., Centerdale, R. I.; Eugene A. Farrell 34, of Crescent ave., Buffalo, N. Y., and Samuel Davidson, 34, of Pearl st., Providence.

On the Air

Tomorrow is the day. New York city will be "destroyed" by 672 airplanes, and scores of CBS and NBC announcers and technicians, who have been patiently preparing for the event, will report the war's battle from vantage points. From roofs of skyscrapers and in the planes themselves the radio corps will describe the event to listeners. WAAB will carry the program from 2 to 2:45, and WEEI will hear it from 3:15 to 4:15. Army officials, war aces and all types of announcers will aid in the description of the affair which is the most prepared, impartial event broadcast in the history of radio.

President Hoover will furnish the introduction to an address by Dr. B. A. Williams, eminent American physicist, heard over WNAC and WBZ at 10 tonight. President Hoover, speaking from Washington, will pay tribute to the scientist who from Los Angeles will speak at the first annual meeting of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, of which Hoover is honorary president.

Then, tomorrow the chief executive will be heard at 1 p. m. over WEEI and WBZ-WBZA when he speaks in connection with the dedication of the Coolidge War Memorial from Ithaca, N. Y.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER . . . The March of Time feature, over WNAC at 10:30, has a phobia for depicting face slapping events. A month ago the Dempsey-Tunney battle was dramatized and tonight the Toscanini-check slapping episode held in Bologna, Italy, over, will be re-enacted . . . Joe White, remembered as the Silver Masked Tenor will be heard as "I A on the WEEI at 9 p'gram this eve . . . Marbles, round round things which indirectly cause holes in the knees of little boys' trousers, will be the theme for discussion by Warren Fox, marble champ, on the WNAC at 6 feature tonight . . . Why CBS has to rig up an international hideout to catch the trills of a nightingale is a puzzle, but if atmospheric conditions are good such a p'gram will be heard from England over WAAB at 6 tonight . . . Mrs. Graham McNamee's impending divorce suit from her famous husband makes excellent copy. And will it would. A front page story on a radio celebrity is rare, for the most part the stories are free from scandal and adverse publicity. In the past year only three stories with a radio coloring received front page notice; the above, the Dodge Sisters' bankruptcy and the Gerald Buckley slaying.—M. G. M.

$7 Debt Settled After 55 Years

Chester Pa., May 22 (AP).—A $7 debt contracted in 1875 was paid today to a grandson of the creditor.

Benjamin Berry, a colored man, money order for that amount from Annie Flaherty of Atlantic City. N. J. She explained that her father, who died several years ago, had purchased a pair of blankets from Nathan Berry 56 years ago and had never paid for them.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

With all her canvas up the four-masted Boston-owned schooner Herbert L. Rawding was sighted 105 miles off Nantucket south bound Capt. Herbert Friswold of the Rawding, a large fruit carrying Fruit Company steamer San Bruno which arrived here from Puerto Barrios with a large fruit cargo. The Rawding riding in light trim was making fair progress because of lack of wind. She was spoken to 105 miles south-southeast of Nantucket.

Capt Friswold came close by the sailing ship and her captain, Mr. C. Lockett of Dorchester, asked that her position and plight be reported to her owners, Crowell and Thurlow of State st. Capt. Friswold communicated with the owners.

The Rawding is headed from Eastport, Me., to Newport News, Va., when she left Boston. She will load in a cargo of coal.

Five and Ten

—By FANNIE HURST—

is in the sea." For God's sake, Mother, please."

Derogatory

"He's not worth the nail of your little finger, much less the mental anguish you are wasting on him."

"I know, I know. I know it all by heart, (my dear) keep on saying it, or I'll go screaming mad."

What did Jenny know? Thank God, Jennifer did not know what she knew; but just the same, sitting wrapped in fur she hugged herself with knowing. What did Jenny know? She knew the torment and the ecstasy of Jennifer, because they were boiling within her—seeing one of these special out-spring kissed days and nights.

Upstairs a new tiny and not troubled to open the news a preliminary-camp, in a beautiful old spool bed. Fannon, who had arrived a few days before, was asleep under sheets that she had personally laid out for him; under thick silk puffs that she had personally chosen. There would be the first two crowded of spring on his breakfast tray that she would journey down to the edge of the world to take to him. What did the older Jenny know of the ever-changing panorama of love? Impudent Jennifer, to assume she knew little.

"My darling, you are all unnerved—"

"I know I'm your darling, mither, and that I am unnerved, but for God's sake, don't keep telling me about it."

"He's a Dog!"

"Pretty question. Oh, no, I don't know. I think, instead, that I am lying in the arms of my lover—his lips are oft—"

"Jennifer!"

"Oh, God, mither, I'm flighty! I don't mean that. I have his lips."

"Of course you do, darling. He's a dog. My poor darling!"

"I'm a fine darling."

Strange words for one Jenny to be using to another.

Some after hour Jenny had lived through with Jennifer those weeks, walking her through the wool of world weariness that through stiff March winds, until their limbs sagged. Tiring Jennifer.

Riding homeward through the woods that were greening themselves for outburst, the sonsething that Jennifer had promised Jenny was dead within her, began to lift its head.

Through woods of running sap she was riding back to the city that contained Berry! He would be under a roof that was no farther from hers on Fifth ave. than the lake had been from the camp. Berry was at the end of this beautiful trail. Would be within easy telephone call. Without a messenger call. Berry! Poor Boy!

How bewildered he must have been these weeks, since that night she had stood him up as he waited for her in his car at a spot which she had appointed at a west-side gate to the park. Tix, tix, tix, not a word or sign since and never sent! There was one now, tucked on the flesh side of the orchid-colored undergarment she wore. The gravitation of the universe was toward Berry—

Longs for Him

Jennifer had learned to sleep in camp. That meant Jennifer was getting well. That meant Jennifer was coming out of the trance of the infatuation for Berry as it wasn't worth her little finger nail. Jennifer had promised. Darling dumbbell Jenny! when the truth of it was that Jennifer was flying back on purring instinct to the land of Berry. He was in New York. Madness of her to have let them put miles between them. He was in New York enchanted destination.

It was difficult! It was impossible, sitting up there beside the chauffeur, spinning through Spring, not to think of one's thoughts when the craving set in to see Berry. Just to be with him, to waken the squint come out along his eyelids when he talked; to get the faint odor scent of him; to trouble to his nearness; to withhold the hands from making little curved cups of themselves to inclose his cheeks.

His strong hair that was full of a strange electric life. Berry's life. It was hard to keep down an insanity of desire through the craving and to sit silently beside the chauffeur and say to oneself, as a child repeats a cute phrase: "No good Berry. Call Snide. Here is a man about to be a father. Jennifer, have you no pride? No decencies? No, No. No. And, damn it, I'm glad!"

Fiery Furnaces

The days were fiery furnaces of desire for Berry. The nights, the weeks. The ride all the way to New York, hills, dales, mountains, streams and that thick stain of thawing mud was one such fiery furnace.

At dinner she could already begin to feel, in anticipation, that moment of the rounding of her fingers over the pink-enamel French telephone in her boudoir that would bring Berry's voice to her.

"Jennifer, dear, we'll go down alone, side by side, by way of the river drive, so we can drop Ramon in his apartment before we go home."

Damn! Damn! Damn! That would delay them by minutes. Her fingers ached for the pink-enamel telephone . . .

On the side of Jenny, to Jenny, the river drive meant a detour, and ten minutes longer with Berry.

It was not quite dusk when the car slid up before the doors that had been copied from the Florentine Campanile. A messenger boy was running down the steps.

"Was that telegram for me?" she asked.

"No, madam, for Mr. Rarick."

"Where is he?"

"In the library. Shall I let him know that you have returned?"

"Yes."

"If you don't mind, mother, I'll rush on up to my rooms to real-ize-know—"

"Yes, Jennifer."

For some reason which she was later never able to analyze, Jenny, instead of following Jennifer to the left, and thereby avoiding the chance of an immediate encounter with Rarick, went up by the right of the broad staircase, and, trailing her heavy motor coat back off her shoulders, hurried to the library.

In beautiful quality of dusk, as she entered, was being rattled into life the mechanical organ, which was repeating the famous "Ah! fors a lui" of Violetta. As if some one had forgotten to turn it off, the stained-glass story of "La Traviata" marching before Rarick, who was seated at the far end of the room in his uniform coat, a telegram crushed in the hand that which he had just read it.

He looked up at the sound of the blue about which one hears but which one so seldom sees, Jenny looked at her husband calmly and said "Avery is dead."

He began to nod his head, regarding her all the while with eyes made out of two white shines.

The Tragedy

She started to laugh. She could not stop. She could not stop, because Rarick, sitting there, could not seem to stop nodding. And, nodding didn't he look for all the world like the bisque bull that used to stand on the mantelpiece in the pressed-brick house of her childhood in Louisville? It had been a black-and-white china bull, and Jenny had included. Every time there were to be guests her mother used to tiptoe in just before dusk and start nodding.

Rarick, replying to her that Avery was dead, kept on nodding like that bisque bull.

"Why, what is it—what about Peter?"

Janet looked a bit scornful for a moment. What about Why. Dr. Cassidy happened in the office on business today and told me Peter is in danger of going blind. Examined by a specialist a week ago. Told that an immediate operation was necessary."

Lorna sank into a chair. She couldn't speak. "I hope Peter's got a thousand dollars," Janet went on, "for that's what it will cost."

"Oh! I'm so sorry," exclaimed Lorna. "Honestly, I didn't know, Janey. I haven't seen Peter for quite a while" Janet asked no questions just put an arm around her.

Put on Her Things
To Visit the Doctor

"Can I do anything, honey?" she asked as Lorna started out. "No, thank you, Janey. I'm going to see Dr. Cassidy."

On a morning evening two months later a young man wearing dark glasses rang the bell of a little cottage in Woodside.

"I'd like to see Miss Lorna Fenton." he told Mrs. Greene, the motherly looking woman who opened the door. He refused to give his name but pleaded that the matter was urgent.

Lorna, pale and thin, came into the living room—started back in confusion as she recognized her caller

"How—how did you find out?" she demanded.

"I've found out a lot of things, Lorna," said Peter And I threatened to jump into the river if Janet wouldn't tell where you were. She said you came out here weeks ago and that you'd get away from everything. I also browbent Cassidy until I made him tell something else. I know, Lorna, why you didn't call for Europe. I know everything. But, oh, my dear, I don't know how to thank you how to find words to express my plea for forgiveness

Peter Is a Winner
Paintings Are Praised

"In my egotism Lorna, I said something once about 'time's delay.' But compared to you, dear, I'm nothing but a clod" He stopped a moment. She had said nothing, just stood there, half bewildered, with a hand over her heart.

"Will you take me back, dear?" he asked, pleadingly. "I'm not worthy, but I'll do anything else, for two connoisseurs and a curator have seen the five paintings and they've passed the acid test. I—I can offer you a trip to Europe, too, dear, if you want it. Why, you love me again, Lorna, to make my life worth while?"

He held out his arms. And a minute later they enfolded Lorna

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—stringy, dull. But three unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet it is not at all necessary. Gray hair either can be restored, or many people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you see people with gray hair who look old—and—she is on the shelf.

Why, my dear, you no longer have the woman who loves Lorna—his wife—to battle against. Why, there are lots of wonderful properties which restore hair to its original color. No complicated "color plan". No danger of getting "off shade" when your hair is flaxen. No—it is not necessary to send for a free sample. Just try it—simply do one thing. Then send not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist and get rid of the "age penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe—so sure—so pure that you don't even know it will satisfy you. If not, you refund your money. Two Graves on Hill. ↕ Galloping Giants.
That Big Dog Derby. ↕ Here, Tomorrow.

They're Thoroughbreds All, by Heart

He may be a pedigreed gen'man, or just a gutter pup,
Need the badge of a thoroughbred, be ribbon blue or cup?
Some are regal by breeding, and some royal by heart,
In loyalty and love for their master, can you tell them apart?
A dog is always your comrade, no matter what may betide,
He never questions the issue, he's always on your side.
Others may fail you dismally, never will some understand—
'Tis good, in trouble or travail, nose cold, muzzling your hand.
And when you're picking a playmate, for that wee lad of yours,

THERE ARE two graves up there in the blue hills of New Hampshire we had planned to visit on Decoration Day. It seems a long time since we went to that cemetery among the elms on the hill and watered the flowers and said a prayer for the ones who brought us into the world, suffered and struggled so hard for us, and loved us so well. But now we're wavering and changing our minds. The heart strings are tugging another way. The kids are calling, pleading. They want to see the Dog Derby on the Common. And—can you beat 'em—they want to enter Pep!

KING PEP of Kerry is his full name But we only use it in front of strangers and on big occasions. To those who know him better he is Kerry Pep. To those of us who know him best, and love him best, he is Pep—just plain Pep. And, folks, let me tell you he is some Dog! In fact, he's a wonder, if we do say it. The kids all know that if they enter him in the Dog Derby on Decoration Day he'll clean up every prize in sight.

"We just gotta enter Pep, Dad," says Tom. "He'll take that other bunch of purps like Grant took Richmond," chirps Ray, who is a bit dangey, even if he does know his history. "Huh, King Pep will be first, and the rest nowhere!" boasts Martin, and little Nina chips in, ungrammatically but oh, so loyally, "There ain't no doggie in the world like our Pep, Daddy. Please take him and us to the Derby."

How Grandma and Grandpa loved kids. There was nothing, nothing, they couldn't, wouldn't do for them. We believe they will sleep all the more peaceful, all the more happy, there under the old New England elms on that hilltop New Hampshire hill, knowing the kids are going to see that Derby.

GRANPA couldn't hitch up the old gray mare, or Grandma put on that old red bonnet, quick enough, if they were here and had the chance to take the kids to the Derby. And Grandpa—bless his old soul—would get just as big a kick as the kids out of it all and surreptitiously and furtively would sneak away from Grandma to see if he could get a bet down on Kerry Pep.

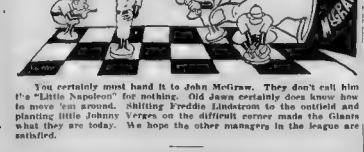
We haven't any Dobbin to hitch to the sleigh and can't drive up to Dover through the fields of clover on Decoration Day. But if you see the family Lizzie rolling down from Wahan one week from tomorrow, loaded down with kids and purps, it's us, brother—it's us!

We'll look—heh, heh—like a traveling menagerie. For Willie next door wants to take his Maje, and Hen'y, across the street, has rang in Rex, and Archie up on the next corner has elected Tops on us and—glory be—little Billie, who lives in that house among the birches, has both promised and threatened to bring along Dot and her whole litter of pups.

Little Tim down there by the railroad hasn't got any dog. It almost broke his heart when we had to tell him he couldn't bring along his Nanny Goat.

YOU MAY not be able to recognize the National League standing in September with the lineup of the teams in May. But at this stage of the race it certainly looks as if John McGraw's Giants, which open a two-day conflict with the Tribe at Braves Field tomorrow, may have something to say in the next world's series. On games won the Giants lead the league, although in the percentage they are 4 points behind the Cardinals. The Giants are likely to go into the lead at any time although not until the Cardinals get through the series with the Reds

A little thing like geography gives the edge to the Cardinals over the Giants. The Cardinals, you know, finish at home. The Eastern clubs wind up in the West. That makes Gabby Street a slight favorite over John McGraw.



You certainly must hand it to John McGraw. They don't call him the "Little Napoleon" for nothing. Old Jawn certainly does know how to move 'em around. Shifting Freddie Lindstrom to the outfield and planting little Johnny Vergez on the difficult corner made the Giants what they are today. We hope the other managers in the league are satisfied.

Another thing that has kept the Giants up in the race is the great pitching of John Berly. The Rochester rookie came through with the bells on. McGraw's Big Four—Fitzsimmons Hubbel, Walker and Mitchell—ably have been assisted by Berly. Joe Heving, brother of Johnny, erstwhile of the Red Sox and now with the Athletics, has done some good twirling also.

WITH OUR own Shanty Hogan of Somerville and Bob O'Farrell, McGraw has the strongest backstop duo in either league. They laughed at Fatty Hogan in spring training. They're not laughing at him now!

A secret lookup infield, Terry, Critz, Jackson, Veraz; just as swell an outfield, Lindstrom, Ott and alternating Ethan Allen and Freddie Leach, a great board of strategy in Chief Bender, Larry Doyle and Dave Bancroft, McGraw certainly is sitting pretty!

The seasons come, the seasons go,
The teams change, and the game,
But somehow or other, Bo—
Jawn gets there just the same!

MISS ENGLISH, MRS. BAKER TRAIL

By BILL GRIMES

After Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., Oakley, Miss Grace English of Colonial and Mrs. W. C. Quimby, The Country Club, had turned in 90's to be deadlocked in first place in the qualifying round of the W. G. A. championships today at the Brae Burn Country Club, Mrs. Henri F. Prunaret, Jr., Charles River, came in with an 87 to lead the field.

At that time one-half the contestants were accounted for

Miss Dorothy Richards, Weston, defending champion, came in with an 88, one stroke away from the medalist, Mrs. Prunaret, while Miss Rosamond Sabey, Belmont Springs, Miss Edith Stevens, the Country Club, and Miss Martha Brewer, Weston, had 89's.

Mrs. Prunaret was out in 44 and although her card showed three sixes for the inward round she came home in 43. The outstanding shot of the round was at the 15th hole, where Mrs. Prunaret chipped in for a four from back of the green.

Mrs. E. H Baker, Jr., and Miss Grace English were both 44—46 for their 90's, while Mrs. Quimby went to the turn in 43 but took 47 to get home

As has been her misfortune of late, Mrs. Baker was putting wretchedly, having six 3-putt greens, missing at least 8 putts of less than two feet. Although Miss English met with better fortune on the greens she was struggling most of the way due to her inability to hit tee shots

Mrs. Prunaret Starts With Fine Drive

Mrs. Prunaret started off with a fine drive, but topped her second needing three to get on and wind up with a 5. She sliced badly off the second tee, the ball going down into the woods and it took her 4 to get on and two putts for a 6

Mrs. Prunaret was short with her second going to the third hole, failed to get her approach close and took a 5

At the long fourth Mrs. Prunaret was on in 3 and was down with two putts for a regulation 5

A poorly-hit third shot going to the fifth cost her a 6, but she got her 3 at the short sixth, and was even 5s at this stage of the round.

A sliced tee shot at the seventh which went into the brook started Mrs. Prunaret on the road to a 7, but she came back with another 3 at the short eighth, and then got a par 4 at the ninth, to be out in 44

After getting home nicely in 3 at the par 5 10th, Mrs. Prunaret needed three putts taking a 6. She swung back in par figures at the long 11th and short 12th, only to come up with another 3-putt green at the 13th for a 6, and then she "fixed" the 14th, where she was short with her third and unable to get down.

Mrs. Prunaret was trapped with her second going to the 15th, and coming out her ball ran to the back edge of the green, where she holed out her chip shot for a par 4 She did not get home in two at the uphill 16th, taking a 5 After a nice drive going to the 17th, Mrs. Prunaret chipped on, but missed a holeable putt, taking a 4

Going to the home hole, Mrs Prunaret was again short with her second, but after a nice chip she got down with one putt for a par 4 which gave her an 87 for the round

Mrs. Prunaret's card

Out ..... 5 6 5 5 6 3 7 3 4—44
In..... 6 5 3 5 6 4 5 6 4—43—87

Mrs. Baker Starts With Regulation 4

After a regulation four at the opening hole, Mrs. Baker drove into the side of the hill from the second tee, took three to get on and three putts to get down for a six. At the third hole Mrs. Baker was home in three and down in two putts. Off the fourth tee Mrs. Baker sliced badly, just missing going out of bounds and then she was over the green with her third shot, taking a six by missing a short putt after a fine recovery.

Mrs. Baker needed to get four to get home on the long fifth and wound up with her third six in five holes. Although Mrs. Baker's iron to the sixth green hit the target her ball bounced back off the green, but she chipped up and was down in 1 putt for a three

Going into the seventh, Mrs. Baker pulled her second shot and finally managed to get a 5, by a fine approach shot through the trees. She hit a sour iron shot off the eighth tee just missing the gully and after getting on with her second from a bad lie, she took three putts for a five, the second of which was less than two feet

The regulation par four gave Mrs. Baker a 44 to the turn

Going to the long 10th, Mrs. Baker pushed her second shot into the rough and then put her third over the green taking a six. She ran down a long putt for a birdie four at the long 11th, but after a fine iron shot to the 12th green she three putted it for a four and duplicated that feat at the 13th taking a six

Mrs. Baker Misses Three Putts at Finish

She was home in 4 at the long 14th and down in two putts, and the best she could do at the 15th was a five, as she went over with a short approach. Three missed short putts put Mrs. Baker one over par at the 16th, 17th and 18th holes, and she wound up her uneven journey with a 46 giving her a total of 90

Aside from the fact that she was not driving up to her usual form, Miss Grace English, Colonial, was the medalist in the championship last year at Salem, played fine golf to get her 90 while Mrs. Quimby played steady and well with the exception of the 14th and 15th holes

CAN SHE REPEAT?

Miss Dorothy Richards, who opens her defense of the Women's Golf Association championship today, is facing a task successfully accomplished by only Miss Glenna Collett and Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr. A strong team will tee off at Brae Burn.

Men's state doubles tennis championships are slated to start tomorrow afternoon and continue for a week on Newton Centre Squash Tennis Club's courts in Newton

BRITISH GOLF CROWN WON BY COLLEGIAN

Westward Ho, Devon, Eng., May 22 (AP)—Eric Smith, little known golfer from Cambridge University, today won the British amateur golf championship, defeating John DeForest in the final 36-hole match one up.

Starting the afternoon round 2 down, DeForest still was off his game, losing the 20th and 22nd holes to go 4 down

He got all but one of them back however, losing advantage of Smith's bunkered drive at the 25th, holing a five-yarder at the 27th and doing the 28th in a birdie three.

His 4 it was not good enough to overcome Smith's 3 and had to concede was to Smith largely on his own loose play but he carried the fight to the last hole for decision.

Smith, 21 year old, the son of a London banker, had never played in a national championship before, his play heretofore having been restricted to college and club affairs.

Rajah Should Have Joined the Navy

—By MYLES T. McSWEENEY—

You couldn't expect a man who has just completed a 24-hour ride on a merry-go-round to thread a needle

Why do fans think Hornsby can manage a ball team. He might be a good pilot if he knew what club he was with.

In 1925, Hornsby was playing with the Cards. One day Sam Breadon said: "Rog, will you do me a favor? Manage the team." Rog did and everything was O. K. but—

He was traded to the Giants the next season. One day John McGraw said: "Rog, I don't feel well. Will you manage the team?" Rog did and everything was O. K. but—

The next year he was traded to the Braves. On day Judge Fuchs said; "Rog, will you do me a favor? Manage the team." Rog did and everything was O. K. but—

The next year Hornsby found himself with the Cubs. And again, one day last year, a moans said: "Rog, will you do us a favor? Manage the team." Rog did and everything was O. K. but—

Now Hornsby has to go home to Chicago to explain why his team isn't higher in the league!

MELLO GETS FIGHT PURSE

Mello's money had been held up by an injunction granted in a suit brought against Bobby Goodman by his manager, Johnny Greaves of Nashua, N. H. Judge Quinn of Suffolk Superior Court today released the money due Mello from the bout as AI is not a party to the litigation, brought by Glennick

Goodman's one-third interest in the purse was not released by the court.

BATTALINO, LA BARBA IN TITLE FRAY

New York, May 22 (AP)—Christopher "Bat" Battalino, featherweight champion, barely made the weight today for his 15-round title defense in Madison Square Garden tonight against Fidel LaBarba, sturdy Californian. Battalino weighed an even 126 pounds, the class limit, while Labarba scaled 125½.

New York, May 22 (US)—The featherweight championship of the world, a title hallowed by such super-fighters as Dixon, McGovern, Attell, Kilbane and Dundee, once again has the fight world in the customary fever of expectancy.

It goes to the post tonight at Madison Square Garden with the current incumbent Christopher (Battling) Battalino meeting the outstanding contender of many years, Fidel LaBarba, of Los Angeles. The bout is scheduled for the Derby distance of 15 rounds, in his only other title match in this city, against Kid Chocolate, Battalino is guaranteed $25,000, win, lose or draw, and the Garden will only break even if it does a $45,000 business

BROUILLARD TELLS HOW HE BEAT AL MELLO

LOU WAS SET TO SAIL IN AT BELL

This is the fifth of a series of six articles in which Lou Brouillard, newly-crowned New England welterweight and middleweight champion, tells his life story to Jack Conway, Sports Editor of the Boston Evening American.

By LOU BROUILLARD

It was my bout with Frankie Belangie at Montreal when I showed me how to lick Al Mello.

It was a cold night on which I battled Belangie. The dressing room of the club was arctic.

When the eighth and semi-final started, I was chilled. I had a bathrobe wrapped around me but this was not enough to keep me warm.

The door of my dressing room was open and I could hear the announcer introduce the semi-final boys. The gong sounded and the bout was on.

At the sound of the gong, I tossed my bathrobe on a chair and started shadow boxing. I felt myself get warmer and so I continued shadow boxing right through the bout. I was perspiring freely when the timed round. I continued warming, out in my dressing room until I was sure that my opponent was in the ring.

I then wrapped my bathrobe around myself, and hurried to the ring where my seconds put on my gloves. The gong sounded and I came roaring out of my corner.

SCORED QUICK KAYO

I was warmed up, my muscles free. Belangie was still cold from sitting in his dressing room. I drove Belangie to the ropes under a barrage of blows. I nailed him on the chin with a fierce right hand punch. He hit the canvas and was counted out.

When I battled Mello I was ready to enter the ring when the semi-final started. I boxed five rounds in my dressing room before answering the call to action.

This is why I was able to set such a fast pace in the first two rounds of the bout. I took the fight right to Al and kept driving to close quarters where I barraged with both hands to the head and body.

Mello then proved what a great fighter he still is. In the third round, he waited and picked his shots. As I rushed at him wide open, he clipped me with terrific left-hand jolts on the chin.

Don't let anybody tell you Mello cannot hit. One of his punches struck a cord on the right side of my neck and almost tipped me over.

When one of Al's socks got me closed my right eye. I didn't know that I had been damaged so severely. It was not until I was back in my corner that I realized I would have to fight with the aid of only one optic.

Mello took desperate chances in an effort to win by a knockout in the fourth round. I kept driving in close at all times. I felt that if I maintained a fast pace that Mello would crack. Of course I was tired, but I still had plenty of strength in reserve.

MELLO'S LEGS GONE

The break came to me in the fifth round. Mello entered the first part of this frame but I noticed that he was tired. In the latter part of the round Al started to stumble and I knew that he was the slow in pulling out of the way. I mix the attack.

With Mello stumbling, I let an even faster pace in the sixth and seventh rounds. I thought I had Mello on the verge of a knockout in the seventh frame, but I couldn't knock him down. A fighting fool and a keen mind carried Mello through some tight spots.

Came the eighth and I entered my corner tired. Mello in a worse condition when Bobby Goldman manager of the Lowell squirted water in a towel. This token of defeat gave me the New England welterweight and middleweight championships.

Naturally I was elated at my victory. From the mills of Danielson, Ct., to a championship. Some hop, I'll say.

Yet I felt sorry for Mello. Like myself, he came out of the mills. His early struggles were much like my own. I was pleased to see that Mello had saved much of his ring earnings and that he can retire in comfort. I hope when some younger and stronger opponent defeats me that I can emulate Mello and announce my retirement from the ring.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

How definitely to start your back swing is hardly so important as understanding what the purpose of the back swing is. Many of you think it is a necessary drawing back in order to get the club up in the air so you can hit with it. It is nothing of the sort. The object is not so much to get the club elevated as it is to get your body wound up. The necessary turning of your body is a twisting which your club should lead—and to this end your hands should be in command of everything as you back swing.

Upon his graduation, he began playing semi-pro ball in Chicago and attracted the attention of Braves' scouts. He was signed by the local club this past winter and showed so much ability during spring training that he has been retained, despite his lack of experience.

Competent critics rate him as the most promising rookie first sacker to break into fast company since Hal Chase.

He still makes his home in Chicago.

Cleveland, May 22—Babe Ruth led the Yankees to a 7-to-6 victory over Cleveland yesterday by hitting his fifth home run of the season, a triple and a double.

The homer, Ruth's first since May 6, came in the first inning after Combs had stretched his hitting streak through 20 games by smashing out a double.

TRIBE EDGES WESTERN CLUBS

By JOE CASHMAN

After two days of idleness, our Braves will open a most important six-game series with the New York Giants tomorrow.

There will be single contests on the morrow and Sunday at the Wigwam, following which the rivals will travel to New York for four games in three days, starting with a doubleheader on Tuesday.

This engagement will be an acid test of the strength of the Tribesmen. The Giants are playing the best ball of any club in the league right now and are the only outfit that can boast of an edge over the natives in games played to date.

In their first meeting here, each club won two games, but later, over on the Polo Gorunds, the McGrawmen captured two verdicts in a row from the Warriors.

If the Tribe can split even in the next six games, it is virtually sure to start its first Western trip very much in the running for the flag as it is now only 2½ games back of the New Yorkers, who are leading the parade as far as games won and lost are concerned, even though they are four percentage points back of the champion St. Louis Cardinals.

Giants' Showing Surprise of League

The showing of the Giants thus far has been one of the season's biggest surprises. Expected to have plenty of trouble staying in the first division when the race started, they have been at or near the top ever since the barrier lifted.

Pitching, counted upon to lick them, has been responsible for their success, just as it has been for the Braves.

"McGraw has a great club, both offensively and defensively, but he failed to get anywhere with it last year because he didn't have enough mound strength and he won't get anywhere this year for the very same reason."

Such was the consensus of the critics while the club was training in the South, but the Little Napoleon has been able to laugh at that prediction thus far.

Not only have his regulars, Fitzsimmons, Walker, Hubbell and Mitchell, pitched great ball, but Brix, Merrill and Heving, three rookies, have also come through with winning performances.

These Giants just can't help being in the thick of the fight all the way if the pitching stands up, for the rest of the lineup is without a weakness.

Braves Edge Westerners in Home Series

Rain halted the final game of the series with the Cubs yesterday, and the Braves finished their first home stand against the Western entries with a record of five victories, three defeats and six games to play off as part of doubleheaders when next the boys from the wide open spaces happen this way.

The Warriors played three of four scheduled games with the Reds winning two of them. All four games with the Cards were rained out but all three scheduled with the Pirates were played and the natives won two of them. Two of the three tilts with the Cubs were staged and the rivals split even.

With only three winning pitchers Brant, Seibold and Zachary, Manager Bill McKechnie ought to be worried over the number of twin bills that have piled up on his club but he doesn't appear to be a bit disturbed over the situation.

"We'll be o.k.," he says and we find it impossible to disagree with a manager that has a club picked to finish sixth up there in third place only a step or two back of the van.

Buccocla Signs Up Three of His Stable

Phil Buccola has closed matches for Jimmy Mendes, Vittorio Livan and Tony Aquaro. Mendes will meet Big Boy Rawson in a five-rounder on the Schaaf-Maloney card at the Boston Garden next Tuesday evening. Livan will tackle Jack Rosenberg in a ten-rounder at Madison Square Garden, June 4.

DEGLANE DEFEATS STASIAK IN ROUGH BOUT

M'COY AND MORELLI IN DRAW

By JACK CONWAY

Deglane won the first fall in 32 minutes, 15 seconds with a double arm scissors and body hold, while he took the second loss in 9 minutes with a reverse body lift and crab.

The new champion has been added to the long list of wrestlers who have been tossed into my lap this season. I am beginning to believe that I hold the world's record in this respect.

The battle-worn Mister Stasiak picked Deglane up and let him shoot for my head. I have other uses for my head and so pulled away slightly only to find Deglane crashing into my lap. Just so as to prove that I have not any desire to make catching wrestling a monopoly I crushed the little boidcr right into the lap of Dave Egan, who has caught Harvard football players and what not in that aristocratic lap of his which he brought to Boston from Newport when he first started to step out and do things.

Mister Stasiak once tossed Stanislaus Zbyszko into my lap, and I am willing to state it was much more comfortable catching a young fellow like Deglane than it was to hanging on to a man mountain like the sider of the Zbyszkos.

The Lion was not as rough against Deglane as I have seen him on other occasions. He eliminated much of his clowning and got down to old-fashioned wrestling. He wanted to win the championship and was rather crestfallen when he failed.

Deglane was cool and calculating at all times. He cut the old Lion down much like a seasoned woodchopper would tip over a giant tree.

When wrestling was resumed, Stasiak started tossing right hand uppercuts. On one occasion the big fellows went crashing through the ropes to the floor where they continued battling.

Referee Charley Donnell hopped out of the ring and clamped a headlock on Stasiak which enabled Deglane to get free. Deglane whirled the Lion around a couple of times before he tossed him for the final fall.

Morelli and McCoy Battle to a Draw

Al Morelli, Boston College, and Bibber McCoy, Holy Cross, went 30 minutes to a draw. McCoy was in the better condition of the two men at the finish, and would probably have won in a longer match. It was a case of where Bibber's experience stood by him.

It was a hard, fierce contest. There was considerable rough work. At times the rival college stars punched merrily away at each other. Twice they almost crashed head on when each let fly with a tackle at about the same time.

Nick Lutze tossed Louis Loew in 18m. 5s. with a reverse back fall. Following his victory, Lutze was signed to take on Gus Sonnenberg in a finish bout at the Arena, a week from next Thursday night, with Ed George and Farmer George McLeod in the semifinal.

Sailor Arnold of Newport and Joe DeVito of Providence went 10 minutes to a draw, as did Glen Wade of Iowa and Jake Patterson of Syracuse.

Jack Conway Adds Another Pair to Win Column

Jack picked Bibber McCoy to win from Al Morelli, but he didn't win or lose when this affair ended in a draw.

W	L	P. C.

BUCKLEY BETS ON SCHAAF

Dan Carroll, manager of Jim Maloney, and Johnny Buckley, Ernie Schaaf's pilot, met at the office of President Gilman of the Boston Garden. Matchmaker Billy Ames was also on hand.

As Carroll started to leave the office, he turned to Buckley.

"Don't forget, Maloney will knock Schaaf out inside of five rounds," said Dan.

"I'll bet Schaaf's entire purse that he won't," shot back Buckley.

"Okay," replied Buckley.

Buckley feels he has the money collected already.

"If anybody gets knocked out next Tuesday night, it will be Maloney," insisted Buckley.

Ames announced he has completed his preliminary card. Jack Derval of Quincy and Gene Stanton of Cleveland will meet in a supporting ten-round bout. Al Morro of Los Angeles will oppose Mike Blandell of St. Paul in a seven-rounder. Big Boy Rawann and Jimmy Mendes of New Bedford will step five heats, while Johnny Dixon of Boston College and Paul Zeramby of Lynn are down for a five-rounder.

Dorchester Boy to Coach Terrier Line

Kennealy is a former St. Bonaventure and professional football player. His appointment marks the second change in the personnel of the B. U. football coaching staff in two years. Last fall Hilary Mahaney and Al Marsters succeeded Peggie Brown and Ed Robinson. Mahaney was assistant to the two former Brown stars since 1925.

The B. U. athletic council announced the reappointment of Mahaney and Marsters last December. The selection of a line coach was left to Coach Mahaney. His choice of Kennealy was approved by the council yesterday.

DIAMOND DUST

By JOE CASHMAN

Neither of our Boston ball clubs is scheduled to play today. In fact, the only contests carded are Chicago vs. Cleveland and Detroit vs. St. Louis in the American League and a double-header between Brooklyn and Philadelphia in the National League.

The Red Sox dropped their fifth straight game when they fell before the Browns yesterday, 2 to 1 in the second and final game of the series in St. Louis. For the third time in as many starts, Jack Russell pitched a great game but his mates couldn't make enough runs to give him a victory.

The Athletics, Yankees and Senators, class of the American League, have pulled far away from the rest of the field. The Senators, in third, are 4½ games ahead of the fourth-place Tigers and the Sox. In seventh, are only three games back of the Bengals, despite their losing streak.

The Athletics turned in their 13th straight win yesterday by whipping Detroit 12 to 5, but the Yanks kept pace with them by handing Cleveland its 12th straight defeat, 7 to 6. So did the Senators by beating the White Sox 4 to 2. The Macks have a 2½ game lead over the Yanks, who are one-half game up on the Solons.

There were no changes in the National League standing yesterday, as all eight clubs in the circuit were baited by rain.

The Braves have only to invite the fair sex to the Wigwam to make sure of the weather prevent ng a game. There hasn't been a Ladies Day contest at the orchard all season.

Burleigh Grimes, Cards' ace, can't go after his sixth straight win of the season until Sunday, as he drew a three-day suspension yesterday for abusing Umpire Moran in Brooklyn.

Boston Entry Wins Ribbons in Show

With his master, Edward Donnelly a junior at Georgetown University, in the saddle, the grandson of the Whashroom of race track fame, captured the novice hunters and middleweight green hunters classes and finished fourth in the event for middle and heavyweight thoroughbred hunters.

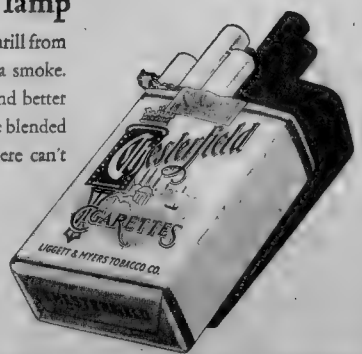
Big game is big game whether you hunt it yourself or share the thrill from an open book, or the silver screen. Likewise, a good cigarette is a smoke. What you taste in Chesterfield is what you want to taste—milder and better tobaccos. The taste is there and the fragrance too, for these tobaccos are blended and cross-blended to bring out their full aroma and flavor, and there can't be anything better in a cigarette.



FOR NINETEEN years, our Research Department has kept intimate touch with every new development of Science that could be applied to the manufacture of cigarettes. During this period there has been no development of tested value or importance to the smoker which we have not incorporated into the making of Chesterfield cigarettes.

NEW ENGLAND BUILDING AT FASTER PACE

By FRANK H. MELDON

New England building is proceeding at a somewhat faster pace This is shown by a report furnished us today by the F. W. Dodge Corp. for the week ended May 19. This shows the total of contracts awarded in this section for the week as $8,648,600, which compares with the 1931 weekly average of $8,046,300.

G. F. Swift, of Swift & Co., who left Cape Cod as a butcher's boy at 18 to become a millionaire packer, points out today that beef prices are now the lowest since December, 1926. This is because of a large increased cattle receipts during the past few weeks, he says. Live cattle prices are unprofitable to produce. From the standpoint of cost and food

* * *

Prices canned remain indefinitely at levels unprofitable to producers. Great responsibility for future cattle production rests upon retailers who should be willing to specialize on beef sales in order to push beef into consumption, says Mr. Swift. If there are further declines in live stock prices, they will have the effect of still further decreasing cattle production, and the latter will result in extremely high prices for beef, to the disadvantage of retailers and consumers, Mr. Swift tells us.

Joseph B. Eastman, Boston's member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, dining with the Eastern railroad executives' move for higher "emergency" freight rates, was quoted as saying no other line was 'talking of higher prices for its products. This is not the fact, and there are persistent rumors of an advance in cigarette prices by manufacturers around the first of June.

* * *

The sugar industry also is getting itself in shape to command higher prices. Tin and rubber industry conferences have like means. Standard Statistics today reported advances for the week in nine major materials.

* * *

Initial announcement that the railroads would seek advances in freight rates repeated expectations in this column several weeks ago Ambassador Dwight Morrow, Central headed by Morris McDonald, former president of the Boston & Maine, said per unit earning dividend of 75 cents given the first break in New England rail distributions in recent years. However, McDonald explains that the full year's rate is left undetermined until evidence of the customary better returns of the latter part of the year appears.

* * *

In the quarter closed March 31 the Maine Central reported a net profit of $16,241 after charges against a surplus of $371,871 in the first quarter of 1930 and a surplus of $168,749 for the corresponding period of 1929.

* * *

The dividend rate was raised from a $4 annual basis to $5 at a meeting of directors in March, 1930. Payments on the common stock were resumed in May, 1926, with declaration of a "special" dividend of $1 per share, payable June 15 of that year. The dividend was suspended in 1920, prior to which it had been for a long period on a $6 basis.

* * *

We thought it would come. At the annual meeting of the Newton Chamber of Commerce, Leverett Saltonstall, Speaker of the House, declared the Massachusetts legislature would have to consider taxing chain stores.

* * *

The Indiana decision, regarding which many observers will note minority findings, invited political attacks on the "chains" via the much trodden trail of taxation. Opposition to extra taxes on the "chains" covers many angles. The taxes would undoubtedly be passed on to the customer. How many householders would like to pay more taxes? We doubt if many hands are raised.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Wall st leaders performed erratically today, although the market ran true to form by continuing yesterday's late rally in the first period. Coppers were again sold on the bad news of lower prices for the red metal and carrier shares were active toward securing freight rate advances.

Case Moves Up on News of Dividend

J. I. Case reflected gratification over consummation of its regular dividend rate by quickly jumping around $4 a share. Bears had predicted the rate would be cut.

Utilities in Front of Early Rallying

Anaconda Is Down to New 1931 Low

Industrial Alcohol Is Weak Performer

U. S. Industrial Alcohol was a weak performer among the specialties today, speedily dropping around $3 a share to a new low

Steel Leaders See Improvement

Leaders of the steel industry in Pittsburgh did not hesitate to stress current problems, including the handicaps of the present low price scale for finished steel, but predicted an improvement in the whole business situation before the end of the year. Big Steel reached its best price of the day in the initial period, but faded off sharply when the professionals made a bid for their profits

Week-End Rally Is Anticipated

A week-end rally on technical grounds is anticipated in many quarters. However, conservatives are advising clients to take advantage of such an upturn to reduce long commitments. Quiet buying in some of the rails is noted, because it is believed this group will show the way on a recovery.

Woolworth Sold on Tax Decision

Indiana tax decision on chain stores may open possibilities for considerable selling in Woolworth recently. The influence on the market has been exaggerated as the official announcement has been made that Woolworth would be compelled to pay about $750 additional tax in Indiana as a result of the decision. Initial reaction to the announcement reflected the readiness of traders to put out short lines when anything which appears unfavorable makes its appearance. There is quite a short interest in the stock at present.

Short Covering in Westinghouse

Quite a few of the shorts in Westinghouse Electric have been covering part of their short obligations the past two days. This buying has come in with unfavorable looks inclined to sag. The demand is due to the announcement that the company increased at a profit in April, which is decidedly better than the previous months of the current year. Conditions in the business made economies necessary which are now benefiting the company.

Foreign Business of American Chicle

Foreign business of American Chicle last year was down 15 per cent to 20 per cent because of the world-wide depression, but it has been stated recently that there has been quite a revival in this branch and sales to foreign companies now are almost equal to those during the period of high levels in 1929. Chicle has done quite well during the recession in general business.

STOCKS RALLY AFTER SELLING IS ABSORBED

New York, May 22—Stock leaders had slight difficulty in absorbing fresh selling when it appeared in Wall St today. The flurry of short selling liquidation centered in copper and chemical shares.

When the selling was out of the way rallying spread over the general list, and most issues concluded the session with prices in the aggregate little changed.

TRADING SLUGGISH

Wall St. was more interested in the bond markets, where the rail issues manifested the best tone in some time, in response to the eastern rail heads project to revise freight rates.

Rail stocks, although able to work a little higher, seemed largely to lack the point of view of investments in the higher rate program.

J. L. Case was a strong spot, rising more than 6 points, in addition to the ordering of the regular dividend. Missouri Pacific and New Haven were other points of strength, finishing a point or so higher included American Can, American Telephone, American Tobacco, North American, Gillette, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Johns Manville and National Biscuit.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel closed with minor changes, the former dropping 2 points to a new bottom. Allegheneels closed with only a fractional loss.

Allied Chemical and U. S. Industrial Alcohol finished only 1 and 2 points lower, after selling down about 4 and 5.

FARTMAN RALLIES

Eastman Kodak lost 3 net, after selling off about 3. Peoples Gas dropped 15 points, then recovered all but 3.

Wall Street attention converged upon the steel industry, as the American Iron & Steel Institute met in semi-annual meeting. Of particular interest in financial circles were the acid remarks made by James A. Farrell, president of U. S. Steel, regarding prices. He described the price situation as resulting from constant cuts in competitive efforts to get business as "diabolical."

DIVIDEND OMITTED

Mr Farrell asserted that the steel executives had largely themselves to blame for the low state of earnings. This state was sharply reflected in the omission of United States Steel of its preferred dividend of $1.75.

Some steel executives assert that sall executives are in part responsible for their troubles through ruthless competition to get business.

It is pointed out that at meetings of traffic executives of various roads, when an executive wishes to make a recommendations for a specific increase in freight rates, he usually does so on a blank slip of paper given anonymously to the chairman, for fear the proposal may be used by competitors to incur the illwill of large shippers.

Dividend action announced held some of the more gloomy views heard of late. J. I. Case declared the regular quarterly payment of 50 cents, despite widespread rumors of a cut heard a few days ago. General Electric declared its regular payment, but talk of a cut had not been widely credited.

Engineering Award Figures Show Gain

New York, May 22—Engineering construction contracts awarded throughout the country in the past week reached a total value of $80,-851,000, a small increase over the $80,696,000 announced in the preceding week and comparing with $47,894,000 in the corresponding week last year, Engineering News-Record reports.

Bonds Are Active With Tendency Up

New York, May 22—The bond market was active today with a rising tendency. Substantial gains in movement of prices were far from uniform. Railroad obligations were the most active and made a general advance, following the news of plan for the proposal to increase freight rates.

Sears Roebuck Has Good Sales Showing

Chicago, May 22 Dollar sales of Sears, Roebuck & Co in its fifth calendar period showed a decrease of less than 1 per cent under last years figure, totaling $30,648,560 as against $30,885,991 in the corresponding period of 1930. With periods away under last year's, there was also a substantial gain in tonnage sold.

Guy Adds "Legals" to Bay State List

Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy has added Consolidated Gas Company Power Co. first mortgage 5's of 2048 and Southern California Edison refunding mortgage 5's of 1955 to the list of bonds legal for Massachusetts savings bank investment.

Grains Are Firm in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 22—Grains closed steady to firm today. Final prices for wheat were unchanged to ⅝c up, corn ⅛c down to ⅛c higher and oats unchanged at ⅛c up. Rye finished ¼ to ½c higher.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

Copyright, 1931, for the Boston Evening American.

Our candidate for the Pulitzer prize for the best editorial of the year is the Sawyer County (Wisconsin) Gazette, which courageously declares—

How often has one heard the expression, "That rain was worth a million dollars!" Well, once more it might bob up, but with the things that one has to take consideration it is one of those unsolvable puzzles which can not be quite fully explained. The reason for this is that if a rain can be figured in enlarged figures under existing circumstances that presented themselves prior to the time welcomed rains arrived.

* * *

That is the way a lot of us have felt all along.

* * *

* * *

"Planning your future is all very well," says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic, "but it is more to the point to have a well-planned past."

* * *

HOBERTON, Ill.—Emory H Richcreek served today the first day of a two-year term as Mayor for which he has agreed to accept a salary of 50 cents a year.

However, that doesn't mean they are bargains.

* * *

* * *

SUCCESS NO. 3182

This is J. Axel Blotz, economic wizard, who proposes to make the nation fish-conscious. He is preparing a campaign to popularize the use of smoked herrings as book marks.

* * *

Be that as it may, A. J. Ira is assistant sales manager for electric refrigerators for Barker Brothers, Los Angeles.

* * *

Simile—

Insistent as a ship news photographer out for a leg picture.

* * *

Mebbe they're going to have politicians from everywhere compete for the running broad statement championship.

* * *

"Boredom is a modern invention."
—Lewis Gannett.

* * *

Zippy retort, 1907—

"Sneeze, your brain is dusty."

* * *

And it would be economical if women could go without meals as willingly as they go without corsets.

* * *

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

* * *

Your dice.

LOVE AND THE LAW—WHAT LOVE REALLY IS

By HELEN ROWLAND

A MAN cannot obtain an annulment of marriage just because a woman married him under false pretenses, according to the latest Supreme Court decision. That is, not if those "false pretenses" consisted in merely pretending that she LOVED him, when she didn't.

HELEN ROWLAND

OF COURSE, if she had deceived him about her age or her past or her race or something really important, it would have been different. But just a little thing like love! What's THAT—to the judicial mind?

• • •

AND YET, the man or woman who marries for LOVE, and doesn't get it, is the most cruelly cheated person in the world. Because, in these days of good jobs for women, and bachelor flats for men, love is about the only thing to marry for.

• • •

LOVE IS the only thing in the world that makes it possible for two human beings to find any joy in facing the struggles and vicissitudes of life together.

• • •

LOVE IS the only thing that enables a woman to put up with a man's moods, demands and grouches, overlook his conceit, bear with his tardiness and idiosyncrasies, and listen to his alibis, without feeling her nerves snap.

• • •

LOVE IS the only thing that gives a man the strength to stand a woman's nerves, endure her smothering, overlook her capriciousness, cater to her vanity, listen to her chatter and forgive her weaknesses, without losing his mental balance.

• • •

LOVE IS the only thing that will make serving three meals a day, washing the dishes and counting the laundry a joy, instead of a sentence at hard labor.

• • •

LOVE IS the only thing that will keep a man's nose to the grindstone, and at the same time keep him happy and hopeful, instead of breaking his spirit.

• • •

LOVE IS the magic veil that enables a woman to see the dashing wooer of her courting days in the strange creature in a faded dressing gown, who is making faces at the looking-glass through a cloud of shaving lather.

• • •

LOVE IS the only sorcery that will enable a man to perceive the eternal feminine charm in a woman who is squinting at the mirror through a veil of cleansing cream as she rubs the mascara off her eyelashes.

• • •

LOVE IS the only thing that makes it possible for two people to sit opposite each other at the breakfast table every morning, without yearning to drop ground glass in each other's coffee cup.

• • •

LOVE IS the only thing that makes your work a joy and an inspiration, instead of drudgery, your ambitions worth striving for, and your successes and achievements worth while.

• • •

YOU MAY marry for money, for adventure, for expedience—or just for a change. But if you marry for LOVE, and don't GET it, you've simply been "taken for a ride."

Do People Stay the Same?

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SO THEY'RE coming together again—in prison—the two young murderers who horrified the world with a dreadful crime not so many years ago.

Winifred Black

The warden of the great prison kept the two strange young creatures apart in separate detention quarters until the other day.

Now the warden is moving them into the same part of the prison and they will meet at the table in the prison dining hall, and at church of Sundays, and they can sit together and watch the prison ball teams fight to score against each other time and again.

They can listen side by side to the prison band playing gay jazz tunes or melancholy blues—just as bands outside the prison walls play.

They will borrow books from the prison library and walk about in the sunshine a little hour or so a day.

Perhaps.

And, perhaps not.

Maybe the years have wrought a barrier between these two who were once knit close in sinister companionship.

Has either of them changed much do you suppose?

What do the years really do to most of us—after all?

I wonder—do we bring what we are into the cradle with us and does it stay with us as long as we live, or can we by taking earnest thought—change?

MAKE-BELIEVE

By FAITH BALDWIN

Delight Is Playing Safe

By FAITH BALDWIN

DELIGHT felt a sudden hatred of this unknown woman, Lorrimer's mother, who, she shrewdly surmised, was entirely capable of never telling the entire truth to her son, of allowing the girl he had loved to go out of the country, alone and friendless, penniless and frantic with apprehension, unknowing that help had been so near. She didn't want Lorrimer. She didn't want any man. She loved no one, would never love again, she fancied, sitting there, staring at Mary Lou, and listening to her as the soft, husky voice went on, giving chapter and verse, filling in the details, painting a circumstantial picture of the deception.

But she was used safety. And fate had put an ace in her hands!

"Why did you decide to come to me?" asked Delight abruptly as Mary Lou paused for breath.

"So—you call him that, too?" demanded the other woman.

"Yes. Because you did. He told me so," Mary Lou replied simply.

"I see. You'll lose your job over this!" Delight commented, with brutal frankness.

"I know. But it had to go anyway. I couldn't keep on with it. Things were getting too difficult, too complicated. On the face of it, it couldn't continue—forever."

Delight nodded. No use in pressing the girl for further explanations. But there was just one thing she wanted to know, must ask.

"He—he believes you his wife?"

Mary Lou nodded.

"Of course."

"But how—?"

Mary Lou was scarlet, but she kept her eyes steadily on those other blue eyes, so like and so unlike her own.

"After all," she said, "a great many years had gone by. He was persuaded that I—you—oh, it's so complicated—!"

"I understand. Go on."

"That I had thought him dead; that I couldn't, of course, adjust myself suddenly to circumstances; that I no longer cared very much for him. He was—rather wonderful about it," Mary Lou told her, steadily, "and we made a bargain. If I found that I could not come to care for him he was to permit me an annulment of the marriage."

"I see. No, of course, the farce couldn't go on. The comedy had to be played out. Didn't Mrs. Lorrimer realize this at the beginning?" Delight asked her.

"Yes. But she and Doctor Matthews both felt that when Lorry was strong again and well he could be told the truth—that I was an impostor—and would be able to understand the circumstances which had led to the deception."

"And why hasn't he been told before now, as you say, he is entirely well?"

Mary Lou was silent. Delight looked at her and thought she understood. The child had fallen in love with Lorrimer. Well, it couldn't be helped. She was young; she'd forget; the young always forget, mused Delight, out of her wide and hard-bought wisdom.

And Lorrimer—had he, too, fallen in love with Mary Lou? Well, if he had, it was a different situation. It would be because he thought her someone else, someone he had loved for many years.

"What do you expect me to do?" asked Delight, gravely.

"Nothing yet. When Mrs. Lorrimer learns that I have seen you, she will never forgive me. But I must tell her. I think I can persuade her to reconsider, to come to you herself, or to send for you. If not, the matter lies in your hands. It is your affair, and Lorry's. Will you give me a week in which to talk to her, to try and persuade her to my opinion? At the end of that week I shall let you know, one way or the other. If she decides against—us—I'll go, leave the field clear, and you can do as you think best. If she decides 'for me—well, I'll send you word. Or she will. Can you trust me—for a week?"

Mary Lou rose and stood looking down earnestly at the other woman. Delight got to her feet, held out her hand.

"I'll trust you," she said. "I'm still rather bewildered by it all. I'll wait a week," said Delight, "and meantime—I'd like you to know that you're about as fine a youngster as I've ever met." She laughed, suddenly. "What a comedy it all is!" she said.

A SMART SUIT SEEN IN THE BOIS

Knitted Model Vogue for Sports

Sketched in Paris

Facts About Dreaded Mountain Fever

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

IN A Senate debate recently there was a discussion of Rocky Mountain spotted fever. It stated that cases have been discovered in the East. These have been reported in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, North Carolina and Pennsylvania. This outbreak is an unusual occurrence, the disease is mainly confined to the West.

Dr. Copeland

Rocky Mountain spotted fever is a disease transmitted to man by the bite of wood ticks. Ticks or wood lice are insects of a peculiar nature. They take no vegetable food, living entirely on blood. They cling to the skin of man or cattle and are a great problem to sheep herders.

These insects appear in the first part of spring, or as soon as the snow melts on the south slopes of the canyons. The disease is most prevalent at this time of the year.

The infected person has fever. In about three days a skin eruption appears. It is spotted and appears first on the wrists, ankles and back. It soon covers the entire surface of the body.

The disease may be mild, but in many instances is quite severe. In 1927 one locality suffered a loss of 85 per cent of all victims of the disease. Outbreaks of this nature and loss of life stimulated much investigation by the United States public health service.

Due to the excellent work of Dr. R. R. Spencer of the United States public health service a vaccine against Rocky Mountain spotted fever has been discovered. The vaccine is given as a proventive measure to all individuals who may be exposed to the disease.

This vaccine has now been used since 1924. The results thus far obtained are most gratifying. The fact that Rocky Mountain spotted fever has appeared in the East should cause no alarm. The disease is adequately controlled and undoubtedly will soon be completely eradicated.

Paris Still Clings to Wool

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, May 22—Strands of wool are deftly woven into the rich tapestry of the mode. Even though we are fast approaching Summer, wool suits and frocks are still worn by the smartest women. The wool is of a slight weight and texture and makes up beautifully.

Then, too, for sports wear nothing seems to be smarter than the suit of hand-knit wool, a costly fashion, of course, yet essentially a simple one. It needs the most expert workmanship to give the right "hang" and appearance to the knitted suit, otherwise the result is a sorry looking affair. The knitted wool suit is beloved of the younger generation. It is ideal for walking and for sportswear. The light weight wool frock for afternoon wear is still much seen here in most intriguing versions of this interesting but radical departure from the material world.

• • •

The drawing today certainly glorifies wool, as both suits are made of it. The suit to the left, sketched in the Bois, is in a soft woolen fabric, somewhat resembling cheviot, but of lighter weight, and the color is a silvery green. The little jumper-like jacket buttons to the throat and the standing collar buttons to one side. Flaring panels set in at the front of the skirt give a slight width to the straight lines.

The other model shows a smart knitted suit for sports wear. Handknit in heavy navy blue wool, it has a turned-down collar and flaring cuffs and peplum, these touches creating a jaunty and youthful little jacket.

APPLE CUSTARD

Pare 6 apples and cut into quarters. Remove the cores and add 1 cup of sugar, 1 cup of water and 4 tbsps. lemon juice. Cook until the quarters are tender, being careful to retain shape. Take out the pieces of apple and cook the liquid until very thick. Then pour it over the apples and set aside to jell. Make a custard with 1 pt. milk, 3 tsps. sugar, 1 tsp. cornstarch, 2 yolks of eggs and 1 tsp. vanilla. When cold pour over the apples. Beat the egg whites until stiff and add 2 tbsps powdered sugar. Put it over the custard. Over this place a few preserved strawberries or candied cherries.—Mrs. S. L. McLaughlin, 830 Huntington ave., Boston.

HER FAITH IN MEN LOST

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a certain girl for about three months and care for her very much. I go out with her two or three times a week, but she doesn't give me much encouragement. The reason for this seems to be because another fellow with whom she had been going "steady" for about two years had quit her quite abruptly, and since then she has lost faith in men. She says she doesn't believe anything any man says now, because they are all liars and insincere. Can you tell me how to make her believe I am sincere, or assist me in any way to change her idea of men?

W. L. Y.

Dear W. L. Y.—It seems to me the girl is exaggerating her opinion of men for reasons of her own. She may wish to appear as an object of pity—which as you know is supposed to inspire love. She must make an exception in your case for her general blackening of the sex, or she wouldn't go out with you. If you persist, she will probably reverse her judgment. Best of luck to you.

ROGERS SEEKING STORY FOR POLA NEGRI FILM

Howard Hughes Orders Eight New Six-Reel Color Pictures

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, May 22—It now develops that Pola Negri came to America just on the chance that Charles Rogers would sign her on a long contract. Mr. Rogers practically agreed to let her make one picture, but after that he told her, "I cannot say. We do not know just how you will photograph."

One thing about Pola, she has always had confidence in herself. She knows she can act. A test was made and the whole RKO studio was enthusiastic. Forgotten was the one picture flop.

Louella O. Parsons

"I want," said Charlie Rogers, "a picture in which she plays the only foreign role. The rest of the cast must be Americans."

ALL HAS been quiet for so long about Lily Damita's romances that I was asking the other day about her. It used to be a duke here, a prince there and a scion of the Vanderbilt family somewhere else. But Lily has been that quiet, not even vamping a millionaire so far as I know. She is working hard, say her friends. Her next is "The Sphynx Has Spoken." Of course, we announced that, but we did not announce Adolphe Menjou would be her leading man. Lucky Lily, to have an actor with Mr. Menjou's ability.

YES MA'AM, Johnny Mack Brown, if you please ma'am, is out at University City now. That Southern accent of Johnny's gets him plenty of offers to play characters born south of the Mason and Dixon line. This particular picture is "Rio Grande" and there is a lineup of the male cast that sounds all-star to me. Leo Carrillo is co-featured with Johnny, Slim Summerville and Frank Campeau, both experts at Western characterizations, have important roles. Edward Laemmle is directing.

Gilda Gray in Triumph

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Glamorous Gilda Gray is the Metropolitan's bright and shining star on stage for the new show week, the topnotch dancer being the central figure of a revue titled "Shakin' the Blues." On screen, there are the snap and sparkle of a rollicking comedy, "Up Pops the Devil," built upon the footlight play of last year and now cleverly put across on the screen.

With the background of an unusually peppy offering, Miss Gray is a generous of her time and talent, probably giving more than any "personal appearance star" since her previous appearance on the same stage several years ago. She sets a fast tempo for the unit, flashes hither and yon on her twinkling toes, and is ever scintillant and fascinating. She does some singing, too.

Skeets Gallagher captures the chief laurels in the film, which, however, boasts a well-balanced cast, so that its breezy dialogue keeps the audience in a merry-go-round of mirth. The play was too recently seen here to need a retelling of the humanly appealing tale of the young couple who wed with a proviso that they will sever the bonds at the end of a year if the experiment be a failure. On stage, the play was fine entertainment; and the movie is equally amusing.

'Seed' on Keith Screen Now

Are first loves best? This is the question which confronts John Boles in "Seed," problem drama which is now showing at RKO Keith's with Genevieve Tobin as the first love, Lois Wilson as the second, and Miss Tobin again as the third.

Boles, in the role of Bart Carter, budding author, is happily married and father of a large family, when Miss Tobin comes into his life again, and thus is introduced the eternal triangle and all its problems which follow in the wake of this age-old situation.

Koran Tops Bill at the Boston Tomorrow

The "Mighty Koran," who mystified Boston theatergoers but a few weeks ago, will be at the RKO Keith-Boston tomorrow for a week's stay. During his last Boston engagement the old policy of two shows a day, at $1.50 and $2 top, many were unable to see him. During this Keith-Boston engagement, however, there will be four shows a day, in order that all who wish to view Koran may have an opportunity.

"Viking" Star at Luncheon

Capt. "Bob" Bartlett, the skipper in the photodrama, "The Viking," which has its premiere showings at the Park tomorrow, was guest of honor, with Harry J. Sargent, survivor of the recent sealing ship Viking disaster, at a luncheon to newspaper representatives yesterday at the Hotel Statler. Among the other notables in attendance were Roy P. Gates, associate producer of the picture with Varick Frissell, who lost his life on the Viking, and Harry Asher, veteran Boston film man, who is handling "The Viking."

Capt. Bartlett, who is famous for his Arctic expeditions, was secured by Frissell to enact a role in the movie, which is a story of a "triangle," the struggle of two men for a woman's love.

Sammy Cohen Adds to Fame

This little Jewish comedian, who has caused audiences to rock with laughter in his cinema work, has more falls in him than Niagara and all its tributaries.

Sammy, who has had a meteoric rise to fame in the past few years with his inimitable interpretations, is cavorting and falling to the audience's great delight at the Keith-Boston this week.

Sammy Cohen

The way this hard-working jester tosses himself from one end of the stage to the other in his efforts to get a laugh is nothing short of astounding. Every part of his body seems to come in contact with the pine boards at one time or another. But—it's laughs he's after, he's getting them, and that's what counts.

Critic to Play at Concert

A program of music for two pianos is announced as an added attraction to the regular screen fare at the Fine Arts for next Sunday afternoon only. The concert, which begins at 2 o'clock, will be given by Moses Smith, music critic of the Boston Evening American, and Nathan Rosen, local pianist. This feature is unusual because it places a critic at the mercy of those whom he has publicly criticized.

Moses Smith

The program represents a selection of standard classics for the medium of two pianos, which is rather rarely exploited in the halls of music. Each of the numbers on the program was originally written for two pianos, or arranged by the composer himself for that combination.

Following the concert on Sunday will come the first Boston showing of "Cain and Artem."

HER LIFE COMPLETE . . . SHE GAVE HER HUSBAND TO ANOTHER WOMAN!

The joys of motherhood were hers. The responsibilities of fatherhood were his. The five youngsters, who gave her all she asked of life were a barrier to his ambition! . . . so she gave her husband to another, that he, too, might realize his dreams.

From the world-sweeping novel by Chas G. Norris

No More Toll Bridges

Legislature Should Defeat $25,000,000 Harbor "Promotion"

The Masked Reporter is now exposing the shameless liquor, stolen jewels and dope rackets in the city of Boston.

He may find plenty to expose at the State House if the Legislature adopts this quixotic, chimerical scheme to build a ten-mile toll bridge across Boston Harbor from Boston to Hull.

It has all the elements of a high-class "promotion," for which the public would pay.

This bridge would cost $25,000,000. The interest and the salaries of its trustees alone would amount to $1,507,500 annually.

About 16,000 cars in those hours, twenty-two autos every minute, at a toll of fifty cents per car would be necessary to liquidate only the interest and officers' salaries, with no provision for current expenses, repairs and obsolescence.

The public spend hundreds of millions of dollars to construct magnificent highways of concrete and macadam with four or five cars capable of running abreast at high speed.

If the State has any soft cash to invest, the State ought to be spending it on the public highways and on public bridges which are free from the toll nuisance.

Unless the Legislature is less unintelligent and less obtuse than some people suspect it to be, it will give short shrift to this scheme. If it should go through, Gov. Ely doubtless will show his intelligence and ability to see through the scheme by an immediate and stinging veto.

A Courtesy That Pays

A Boston professional man complained that he was unable to procure a ticket at a railroad office and was put to the trouble of buying the ticket and paying for the rebate on the train.

The fact that the President of a $100,000,000 corporation is sufficiently interested to rectify a ten-cent complaint and satisfy the disgruntled customer reminds us that if we are meticulous in small things the big ones will usually take care of themselves.

Also, it reminds us that the New England railroads have never been better operated than by New England men, who know every foot of the track, most of the regular passengers by name and how to meet their demands, even their idiosyncrasies.

Peter F. Sullivan

Peter F. Sullivan, Ex-Mayor of Worcester, will be mourned by a legion of friends and acquaintances.

He came to this country from his native Ireland as a boy, poor in worldly goods, but rich in ambition, industry and amiability.

He began as a newsboy (he used to say with pride he was one of the first agents of the Boston Evening American). He established himself as a successful business man, served his country in the Spanish War, his State in the Legislature and was five times chosen by the people of Worcester, who knew him best, to be their Chief Executive.

The rich fragrance of his memory will live long. His career should stimulate those who despair of success.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Think—Darn You!"

WHAT WOULD you do if you were a little boy of 13 lost in a blizzard, with 19 other little lads?

Nothing outside your shelter but a whirling horror of white . . . nothing inside but a creeping tide of cold, a fire that failed, screams that slowed to whimperings, stilled to death—

A little boy of 13 alone for the first time with death—

Screamed for your mother? Shrieked with fear, as the others had shrieked—at first? Or, mad with fright, gone leaping into the snow?

Elsie Robinson

Bryan Untiedt did none of these things. Wanted to do them all. But driver Carl had left him in charge. So he stuck. Kept moving. Made them fight to keep warm. Ripped his clothes, one by one, from his skinny young body to wrap around the little brother whom nothing could save . . . Today the whole world knows the story and calls Bryan a hero. But only Bryan knows how he got that way.

How did he manage to keep his head . . . choke down child terror and grief . . . climb above child weakness? Let him tell it—

"I noticed my little brother Arlo was going. (Two were already dead.) The thought almost drove me crazy. Several times I started to step out the door into what I thought was another room. I caught myself in time. My head felt light. I almost fell. 'THINK, DARN YOU!' I kept telling myself, sometimes talking aloud, although I seemed to know it was me.

'THINK, DARN YOU!'—that was what carried him through. Ice was freezing him, fear was strangling him, death was clutching him, but he fought them all back and THOUGHT. Only a 13-year-old brain—BUT IT TOOK COMMAND. That young brain held the feeble body, the frightened spirit, in place. Nothing to fight with but THOUGHT, but with that he won out, over death. And saved the others.

And you?

When your test comes as perhaps it has come—

When you're caught by some storm of fate—trapped and lost in a madness of need—and your heart's going mad with fear—what will you do?

THINK, DARN YOU—THINK!

Stop whimpering! Stop being sorry for yourself! Stop counting up the horrors around you! Stop letting your feelings ride you. FOR THEY'LL ONLY RIDE YOU IN CIRCLES. Feelings cannot guide you, cannot lead you out of a jam. There is no SENSE in feelings . . . only SENSATION. They are literally a whirling madness in your blood—a spouting ecstasy or agony from a score of glands. You might as well entrust your destiny to a dose of hives or an attack of giggles as to your FEELINGS. Feelings cannot guide you, only THOUGHT can guide you.

THINK, DARN YOU—THINK!

Think honestly and bravely, what got you into that jam. Think sensibly and quietly what you can do to get out of it. You can always do something. Nearly always it will be a very simple thing. Just such simple, sensible things as Bryan Untiedt did — burning up books, making the big children fight to keep warm. Nothing very remarkable about doing such simple things, particularly when you're craving a lot of noisy, dramatic action. But drama, when you're in a jam, is as bad as plunging headlong into a blizzard. Do the simple things—the NEXT things—the self-controlled things. Do enough of such things and you'll get out of any jam.

THINK, DARN YOU—THINK!

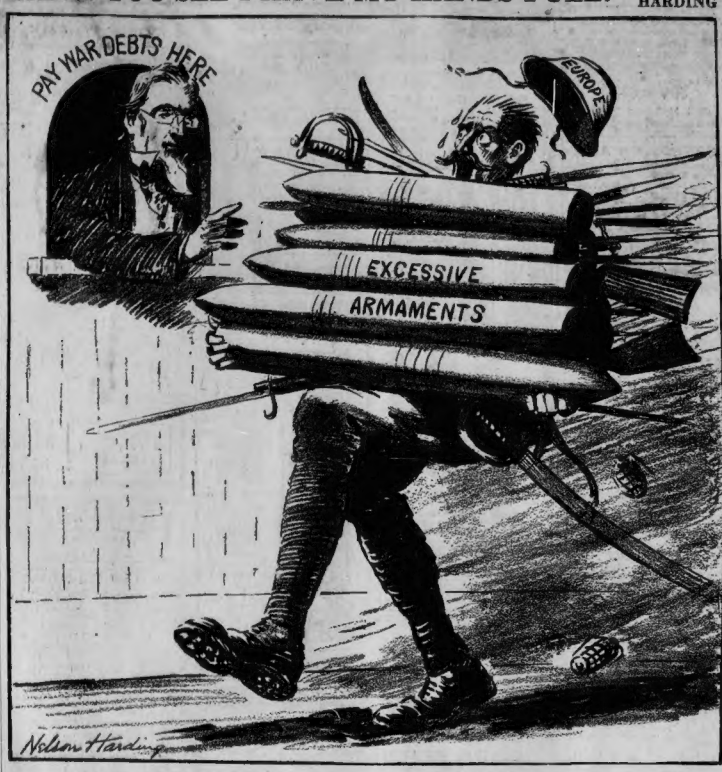
'CAN'T YOU SEE I HAVE MY HANDS FULL?"

By NELSON HARDING



Why speak about those war debts to
The burdened gentleman
Who cannot reach his pocket, so
Why figure that he can?

Can't Uncle Sam see plainly that
His hands are full, so how Can he dig down? Then why bring up
That awkward question now?

What Do You Know?

Match correctly:

1. Alabama	Granite
2. Minnesota	Palmetto
3. South Carolina	Badger
4. New Hampshire	Gopher
5. Wisconsin	Yallerhammers

Do you know:

6. Who was the English Prime Minister who preceded Ramsay MacDonald?
7. Near which of our States is the Bahama Island containing Nassau?
8. In what continent is Afghanistan?
9. What bounds Belgium on the north?
10. What is the capital of Chile?
11. What two seas are boundaries of Egypt?
12. What are the four important rivers of France?
13. Where does the former German Emperor live?
14. Between what two islands does Haiti lie?
15. What island in the Atlantic Ocean is treeless?

1. Yallerhammers. 2. Gopher. 3. Palmetto. 4. Granite. 5. Badger. 6. Stanley Baldwin. 7. Florida. 8. Asia. 9. Netherlands. 10. Santiago. 11. Red Sea and Mediterranean Sea. 12. Seine, Rhone, Loire, Garonne. 13. Doorn, Holland. 14. Cuba and Porto Rico. 15. Iceland.

THE MECHANIZED cavalry went to war but never reached the trenches—when the cars broke down 'twas then they found they'd forgot their monkey-wrenches.

WE UNDERSTAND that the insignia of the new mechanized cavalry will be two crossed monkey-wrenches on the collar instead of two crossed sabres.

THE RADIO is developing novelties so rapidly that by 1932 it may be possible to simplify the campaign for those average intellects by simply broadcasting the braying of a triumphant jackass in reply to the trumpeting of an enraged elephant.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, May 22—Thoughts while strolling: What's become of ginghams with rick-rack edging? Ladies who swirl out of apartment houses smoking.

Journalism's Beau Brummell—George Buchanan Fyfe. An airplane sails over Times Square, suggesting a coasting white hawk. A blue chow. Always think of Caruso eating spaghetti. Pork-chops were his dish. A stool and counter lunch offers "peach pompiere" 15 cents."

Geoffrey Kerr, a London, England, boy who made good in the city. More of those after dinner cordial shops. The thick atmosphere of double entendre. Subpena servers. Carbon monoxide. And roues tottering magnificently. Hal Phyfe and H. T. Webster look alike.

* * *

They are finally tearing down the old Belmont hotel. An all night shoe repair shop next to a dance hall. Those ship grills with sperm-oil lamps and scrubbed white pine tables. At least New York police are attentive to old people crossing the crowded street.

* * *

Bide Dudley's nick name is from Obidiah. After Obidiah McGuffey of the First Reader. Dean Cornwall back from painting murals in London. Those sight seeing wagon barkers trumpeting like dying bull bisons. The new type of gold diggers with spring heels and sly ringlets.

* * *

Why are employment agencies so shabby? Brock Pemberton begins to look the portly plutocrat. And just a few years ago he was only a gangly Kansas gawk. Why have revues overlooked dancers like Ann Pritchard? Or have they? Those large restaurants where waiters descend like a cloud.

* * *

The hawk eyed men with pencil and pad studying stock tables in limousines. Arthur Train window shopping. The glint of a dying sun on the Chrysler spire. Marion Sunshine, who wrote the English "Peanut Vendor" lyrics. Why not print future bond issues with black mourning edging?

* * *

My longest column record for accuracy was eight months and 19 days—at least no mistake was discovered in that time. And then I seemed to have exploded with a bang. On the 20th day not only was everything wrong but I offended one of my dearest friends, split a half dozen infinitives and ended three sentences with prepositions. The next midnight I was plunging across the Atlantic to forget.

* * *

They were wondering what would bring a picture of New York most vividly to mind if one happened to be marooned in the middle of the Sahara. Lisle Bell believed it would be the sudden cry: "Let 'em off—42d street!"

* * *

Apartment house thieves work in sets of three. The first learns the habits of tenants in the building, the second finds out the servants' days off and the third, wearing rubber gloves, does the actual thefting. He does not carry loot out but throws it from windows after dark to his confederates who wait below with a taxi.

* * *

I know a man who stumbled onto a burglar in his bedroom. With a magnificent beau geste, he said, casually and calmly: "Hello, I didn't know you were here." went on into his bath room and slumped into a dead faint.

There was that time I hit out at whatlater proved to be a hat and overcoat on a rack in a darkened hallway. I turned and cleared eight steps of the front porch in one leap trying to screech "Police." My mouth would open but there was not the slightest squeak.

Law Breaker

The good man wondered why the crook
Should violate the statute book
And wreck his life and give his time
To wanton folly and to crime.
It seemed to him that all should pause
To count the cost of breaking laws.

The doctor to the good man said:
"You must go earlier to bed,
Read not so late at night and take
A long vacation or you'll break.
This everlasting tug and strain
Will bring you to a bed of pain.

"Think not that you alone can do
The many tasks which fall to you.
Drop half your burdens; learn to play;
Don't rush so fast along the way.
Though very noble seems the cause,
You're breaking all of nature's laws."

The good man heard, and well he knew
The words the doctor spoke were true.
"I'm one," said he, "who cannot quit.
I'll work and get away with it!"
But now he knows, since health is lost,
Why men refuse to count the cost.

An Ugly Animal, BUT—

There Are a Million Worse Walking Around This County on Two Legs

IT NOW EATS FISH—IT ONCE ATE MEN

This ugly creature, sacred in the eyes of many natives, is a crocodile called Tembi, that lives on an island about 300 yards out in Lake Victoria, Africa.

The creature, as you can guess, is of immense age, several hundred years old, perhaps nearly 1000.

It has been "tamed," if you can call a crocodile tame, for more years than the oldest native can remember.

The monster answers to its name, comes to be fed when natives call. They give fish to the crocodile, but if one of them came too near, he might lose a leg. This crocodile is not particular.

Looked upon now as mildly sacred, and under no circumstances to be offended, or allowed to go hungry, this crocodile, in days past, is alleged to have been revered, as the embodiment of some sacred spirit.

Then, instead of merely feeding the animal with fish, human beings, captured from other tribes, and children, were thrown to "Tembi" for food.

In this hideous head, and its small, cruel eyes, nature seems to have reached the maximum of ugliness. And yet, dear friends, this crocodile is a peaceful, respectable citizen of the waters, compared with some animals that we have walking around on two legs, calling themselves human.

To compare this crocodile, acting according to its nature, with some of our Prohibition crop of murderers, that kill women in cold blood, fearing that they may "squeal," would be to insult the crocodile.

The human race produces types of depravity that leave the whole reptile kingdom far behind, human specimens more cruel than the crocodile or tiger, more poisonous than the cobra, and, unlike the rattlesnake, striking without warning.

Very ancient is the adoration of crocodiles among primitive human beings. The cult of the crocodile dates from high antiquity, especially in ancient Egypt. 'At Thebes,' we read in the 'Royal Natural History,' 'a crocodile was reared from youth in a temple, where it was fed with sacred food, adorned with rings and bangles, and worshipped with divine honors; while after death its mummified body was carefully preserved . . . hundreds of embalmed crocodiles are still to be found. . . . On the northwestern coast of Africa, a pair of tame crocodiles were kept in a pond by priests dressed in white garments, who fed their charges with snow white fowls.'"

Let us hope that this country will get rid of its crocodile-rattlesnake population, multiplied ten thousand times by Prohibition and bootleg financing.

After all, we are not so far removed from Egyptians that worship the crocodiles. Millions of citizens worship Prohibition as their great fetish. And, as a part of Prohibition, they fasten upon the country the army of criminals, the gigantic industry of bootlegging, with its income greater than that of the United States Government.

Sentenced to Spell

San Quentin prisoner perfects a lock the combination of which is set for a series of words instead of numbers and which, being noiseless, cannot be read by the click of the tumblers. The crook who picks that lock must know how to spell, even if he has overheard the combination.

The device offers an opportunity for such moral maxims as "Crime never pays" and "Be sure your sins will find you out and thereby put you in."

Not Yet Spoiled

When little Sylvia McNeely, ten-year-old author of "Dirt," was asked by the publishers to write "about 250 words" concerning herself, she replied that "there isn't 250 words to say about me."
